Columbus Would Laugh. A Story of G. M. Wind, Tide, Waves. Ford Nearly Ready.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

(Copyright, 1927).

FOUR HUNDRED AND THIRTY-FIVE years ago today, in 1492, Columbus sailed the ocean blue and discovered America. He wasn't looking for this country, didn't know it existed, and died not realizing the importance of his discovery. Also they put him in jail.

So it is, often, with great discoveries.

IT WOULD amuse Columbus if he could learn that this country's immigration laws now keep out his Italian fellow-countrymen that have done so much to build up the United States, since he discovered this western land.

WRITE this on your tablets, and never rub it out. Buy something sound in the United States, take care of it, for better, for worse, and it will take care of you.

BEFORE the big war General Motors stock sold at $20 a share. There were 400,000 shares outstanding. In 1916 the stock sold at $850 a share. The company gave five shares for one, the new stock sold at $410. Later each stockholder got 10 shares for one and had 50 shares. His original one share that had cost him $20 was worth $2,100.

THERE was a slump. Pierre Du Pont of the Du Pont Company became chairman of the board, Mr. Sloan, president of the company.

Common stock was reduced from 20,000,000 to 5,000,000 shares. You got one new share for four old shares. The original holder of one share that cost $20, without having toiled or spun, simply by holding on, now has 37½ shares, at present prices worth $5,267. Not a bad return on an investment of $20.

BUT don't gamble, make up your mind what is good, buy what you can, hold it. Some see these things in advance. During the war when the stock exchange was closed, Otto H. Kahn said, to this writer, "buy yourself a couple of thousand shares of General Motors (it was selling then at $50 a share.) Keep it and you will have all the money you will ever need." The profit on that transaction, which required no great investment, would have been a little more than ten million dollars.

A BRITISH lady doctor, Dorothy Cochrane Logan, swims the English channel in 13 hours and 10 minutes, cutting Gertrude Ederle's record by 1 hour 24 minutes. This does not mean eclipsing the Ederle achievement. It all depends on wind, tide and waves, as you know if you have sailed across that rough, mean and choppy stretch of water.

SIMILARLY the man who dies with a "big name" and millions, has not necessarily beaten the record of some poor devil ending in the potter's field. ALL depends on the kind of sailing each had on life's water.

DETROIT says Henry Ford's new cars will begin rolling out of his enlarged factories "within a few days." That is important news to Americans that have bought 15,000,000 copies of Ford's other car. But no announcement means much until Ford himself makes it.

If you need a car go ahead and buy it. There are so many good cars at such excellent values that there is no excuse for being without one. Even poverty isn't an excuse. For cars are sold on time payments, and the car itself, increasing ambition, self-respect and the value of time, will help the buyer to pay for it.

HENRY FORD proves Goethe's saying that "personality is the greatest good fortune of earth's children." It is not Ford's car, but Ford's PERSONALITY that keeps the nation's attention concentrated on all that he does.

IN Los Angeles yesterday Max S. Hayes, Farmer-Labor candidate for vice president in 1920, told the American Federation of Labor it ought to start a labor party in 1928.

President Green of the Federation knows that failure is no good advertisement, and will not advise a step that would mean a miserably poor showing and hurt the prestige of organized labor. Union men know that one of two candidates will win the 1928 election, and they

Her sudden departure after weeks of postponement prevented the race between the two fair flyers that had been in prospect.

FIRE SWEEPS OCEAN CITY

OCEAN CITY, N. J., Oct. 12.—A $3,000,000 fire which swept the boardwalk of the resort last night, destroying two hotels, 40 stores and other buildings, was brought under control early today. The fire was the most disastrous blaze in the city's history. Police believe it was started when a lighted match or cigaret was carelessly thrown into a pile of rubbish alongside the boardwalk.

Firemen from 20 surrounding municipalities—some of them coming from as far as Atlantic City and Cape May—succeeded in checking the flames after a hard battle.

RUTH SPEEDING OVER ATLANTIC

By International News Service.

NEW YORK, Oct. 12.—The Independent Wireless Company reported at 6 a. m, today it had received a wireless message from the S. S. American Banker reporting that the vessel had sighted the American Girl at 10:35 o'clock last night.

The position of the plane was given as latitude 41 north, longitude 65.04 west.

The plane circled the ship and then went on. It was making good time. Weather conditions were ideal.

A northwest wind on the tail of the plane was aiding its progress, the vessel reported.

The wireless company said the delay in receiving the message was due to heavy static, which had interfered with all radio communication during the night.

The American Banker reported that a light northwest breeze was blowing at the time the plane was sighted.

The position given by the vessel would place the American Girl directly south of Halifax and almost 500 miles on her course out of New York.

FLASHES GREETING

A second message from the American Banker, relayed through the Independent Wireless Telegraph Company, was received during the forenoon, confirming the ship's original message sent last night.

The captain of the steamship, however, enlarging on his first radiogram, said the American Girl was flying at an altitude of 1,500 feet, favored by ideal weather conditions and a high barometer. The plane flashed lights over the vessel as it passed.

The plane carried Ruth Elder, the first American woman to attempt a transatlantic crossing, and George Haldeman, her co-pilot. They left

M'GOVERN'S STORY IS BACKED

George W. Woodruff, attorney general during the Pinchot administration; Mrs. J. O. Miller, head of the Pennsylvania League of Women Voters; J. H. W. Simpson, former representative, and Mrs. Mary Flinn Lawrence were among those who heard Walter L. Dempsey, deputy collector of internal revenue, offer Controller C. C. McGovern $100,000 to keep out of the commissioner fight.

Their names were given out by McGovern as having been witnesses to the offer a short time after Dempsey, in the presence of Collector D. H. Heiner, his superior, had flatly denied approaching the controller with such a proposition.

Mrs. Lawrence, speaking at noon today in the McGovern-Shields headquarters, told her audience that she had heard the offer made.

"I want to say that if Dempsey is looking for proof, I am one of those citizens who heard him make his offer," she said. "I am not afraid to put my word against that of Dempsey, the county commissioners or anyone else."

Referring to a statement issued by Commissioner E. V. Babcock and Joseph G. Armstrong, in which they emphatically denied any knowledge of such an offer and demanded that the names of all persons concerned be made public by the controller, Mrs. Lawrence said: "There is a saying down South that if you throw stones at a pack of hounds the ones that are hit yelp the loudest."

In addition to naming his witnesses, McGovern said that just as Dempsey concluded his visit, Judge

THAW GETS ESTATE SPLIT

Harry K. Thaw will receive $152,645.04 by a decree in Orphans Court distributing a three-year income from the "coke trust" of the William Thaw estate.

The same amount will be paid to the Countess de Perigney and Alice Thaw Whitney, the former Countess of Yarmouth, sisters of Harry. The entire amount distributd is $1,558,775.20 and goes to 15 heirs, including the children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren of William Thaw. The account was for income and royalties from June 1, 1924, to May 31, 1927, and was filed by Benjamin Thaw, Thomas Darsie and Gordon Fisher, trustees of the coke trust.

William Thaw, aviator in the World War, and his sister, Burd Thaw Collins, each receive $16,322.52. Others receive shares in the distribution as follows: Mary Thaw Thomson, Benjamin Thaw and Josiah Copley Thaw, $152,645.04 each; Lawrence C. Thaw, $72,190.65; B. E. SENATOR REED ASSAILS REPUBLICAN LEADERS

By International News Service.

SEDALIA, Mo., Oct. 12.—Assailing the Harding and Coolidge administrations and all the Republican policies, Senator James A. Reed, of Missouri, addressed a state-wide meeting of Democrats here this afternoon.

Senator Reed scored Harry M. Daugherty and Andrew Mellon and bitterly criticized President Coolidge for retaining Mellon as Secretary of the Treasury which he claimed was in violation of Section 243 of the revised statutes.

Senator Reed classified the Mellon foreign debt settlement plan an attitude of "vacillation and cowardice."

TIMES "RATHER RIPE"

"The times are ripe and rotten ripe for a change," began Senator Reed in his address. "Let us reassert the truth of the doctrine that—

"If this people are to remain free, the local self-government and the sovereignty of the states must be preserved.

"The Federal power should be brought into the limits not only on the letter, but also within the spirit of the Constitution.

"The march of centralization must be arrested.

"Government by boards and bureaucracies must cease.

"Let us demand honest admin-

RUTH ELDER SIGHTED AT SEA, GOING FINE

Roosevelt Field, New York, at 5:04 p. m. yesterday for Paris.

The report from the American Banker indicated that the plane was making approximately 90 miles an hour. If no mishaps occurred after they were sighted by the steamer, the fliers should have traversed at least 1,260 miles at 7 o'clock this morning. This would place them near the regular steamer lane, as they had planed to head northward after flying due East for approximately 1,250 miles. With its load of gasoline lightened as the hours passed, the plane probably increased its speed after sighting the American Banker and reached the steamer lane before 7 o'clock this morning, it was estimated.

Allowing for a minimum speed of 100 miles an hour, the plane at 5 a. m. today should have completed about 1,220 miles of its journey. The American Girl, carrying the first American woman to attempt a trans-atlantic crossing, left Roosevelt Field at 5:04 p. m. yesterday.

The plane carries a small radio-sending set with a radius of about 25 miles.

Miss Elder expects to reach the French capital after 40 hours of flying.

Miss Elder's co-pilot and navigator, Capt. Haldeman, is a World War veteran who served with the American flying forces in France. He is also a navigator and radio operator.

After passing Montauk Point, on the eastern end of Long Island, the plane headed out to sea.

HAS RABBIT'S FOOT

The pilots have planned their course so that they will head due east for 1,244 miles, then veer toward the English Channel on the way to Le Bourget Airdrome in Paris. None of the previous transoceanic flights took the pilots over so great a stretch of ocean.

A low pressure area was reported off Newfoundland.

The plucky woman was pursuing the longest and toughest course yet mapped out for an ocean aviator. She was flying this course after the season was officially "closed" to such expeditions and with weather prophets wagging their heads in doubt.

She was flying "The American Girl" with a smile on her lips and a rag doll in her arms, flying it with a Bible her mother gave her tucked under the seat, a Chinese good luck ring, the gift of a girl friend, on her finger, and a rabbit's foot tucked in her helmet.

KISSES BACKERS

One of the last things Miss Elder did before she stepped into the plane was to kiss H. B. Cornell, a wealthy orange grower of Florida, and T. D. McArdle, two of the backers of the flight. She kissed each one several times.

Miss Elder's principal backers are eight business men of Wheeling, W. Va. All the backers tried in vain to persuade Miss Elder to abandon the flight.

The American Girl is easily identified. It is enameled a brilliant, flaming orange color and on the side, in script, is painted the American Girl, with the legend, in smaller letters beneath it, "Wheeling, U. S. A." Under the wings is painted "N X-1344." The same numbers and letters are on the rudder.

The plane has a Wright whirlwind motor, similar to the ones used by Lindbergh, Byrd and Chamberlin and by Schlee and Brock.

The plane carries 520 gallons of gasoline, sufficient for approximately 4,800 miles, 20½ gallons of oil and weighs in all 5,500 pounds. The average speed is to be 100 miles an hour, but this will be increased as the gasoline is consumed, making the plane lighter.

The plane has four gasoline tanks in the wings, two of 45 gallons capacity each, and two of 50 gallons capacity each. The main fuel tank holds 196 gallons and another 150 gallons is carried in five-gallon cans, the cans to be discarded as the fuel is used up. The total fuel capacity is 520 gallons.

DRESSED FOR PARIS

Mrs. Haldeman, wife of the co-pilot and navigator, was confident that the flight would succeed.

"I have every confidence in George," she said, "and I know that he'll come through. I'm sure that Ruth will help him, and I know that in an emergency my husband relies on her judgment and coolness."

Asked whether she would like to be in Miss Elder's place, Mrs. Haldeman, who has often flown with her husband, replied: "Certainly, but I'm afraid I lack the ability."

Miss Elder was prepared to look her best when she landed in Paris. Over the costume in which she had been seen at the field all day, comprising a plaid sweater, golf stockings to match, gray knickers and low oxfords, she wore a brown leather flying suit, lined with gray fur. Under her helmet, which matched the leather suit, she still wore her brightly colored hair ribbon. She declared that she intended to divest herself of the flying suit and helmet in the plane before getting out at Le Bourget, so that the crowd would see her in her brilliant sports costume.

Capt. Haldeman wore a Regular Army winter flying suit lined with black fur, and under this a blue business suit.

Unlike Byrd and others who used rubber boats for emergency landings, to keep afloat on the ocean until aid should come, Miss Elder and Capt. Haldeman will stake their lives on the rubber suits lined with a wood composition, which are expected not only to keep them afloat, but to keep them warm, as well.

Water carbide flares which ignite when they strike water are carried as distress signals.

The rations carried on the flight consisted of three quarts of hot coffee in thermos bottles, one quart of hot beef tea, six turkey sandwiches, 6 Swiss cheese sandwiches, six bars of milk chocolate and a half dozen oranges.

8-YEAR TERM PROPOSED FOR M. E. BISHOPS

Proposals that bishops be elected for eight years instead of for life, that district superintendents be elected instead of being appointed by the bishops, that laymen be permitted to take part in the proceedings, and that retired ministers be pensioned on an insurance basis, were among the principal matters scheduled to come before the Pittsburgh Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, which convened in the First Methodist Episcopal Church, McKeesport, today, in its one hundred and fourth annual session. Appointments to pastorates for the coming year, and the election of six clerical and six lay delegates to the General Conference, which sits at Kansas City next May, were other important items in the program.

With Bishop F. J. McConnell presiding, the conference opened with the partaking of communion by the 258 ministers in attendance. They came from five districts of Western Pennsylvania and the West Virginia Panhandle. Following the sacrament, came roll call, organization, memorial services for members who died during the year, and an address by the Rev. J. V. Wright. Committee meetings, informal conferences, and an address by Bishop Edwin H. Hughes, of Chicago, occupied the afternoon.

It was announced that the Rev. Thomas Morris, pastor of the First Church, of New Kensington, had been transferred to Buffalo.

GRAYSON READY TO HOP

tions were not favorable for an early hop.

Mrs. Grayson retired at 12:30 a. m. and did not express any intention of setting out in the wake of Ruth Elder across the Atlantic before noon.

Mechanics were tuning up "The Dawn's" engines and filling the tanks with fuel when word that "The American Girl" had set out into the setting sun with her nose pointed to Paris. Immediately they began to speed up their work.

2 Women Fight; 1 Dead

During a quarrel over a love affair early this morning, according to a police report, Nellie Williams, 26, of 67 Logan street, Pittsburgh, stabbed Laura Charity, 32, of 314 Bell avenue, McKees Rocks, in the heart with a penknife, killing her. Both are Negroes.

The killing took place at the home of Ida May Hill, of 326 Bell avenue, shortly after 1 o'clock. The Charity woman, after being stabbed, ran out of the house and fell into the street, where she died 15 minutes later. She was married and leaves a family.

The Williams woman was arrested and taken to the McKees Rocks Police Station, charged with murder.

Frank I. Gollmar entered the office and recognized the deputy collector, addressing him by name. Dempsey today admitted being in McGovern's office "for two or three minutes" on September 26, but said he had neither met nor recognized anyone there except the Controller.

The Controller declined to name several other witnesses, declaring that the use of their names might cause them to lose their positions. He also refused to name the prominent politician to whose office Dempsey was trailed, according to Senator C. M. Barr, who revealed the alleged bribe offer in a speech yesterday. At that time Senator Barr said that he and nine others had listened over the dictaphone while the offer was made.

Dempsey, it developed this morning, is a resident of Perrysville, Ross township, but formerly resided in Clearfield county. He owes his federal position to John F. Short, former United States marshal and prominent Clearfield Democrat. Dempsey has worked in the office since leaving the army after the war. He is a Republican, he said, but knows no prominent politicians here.

Paris Calmly Awaits Ruth Elder's Arrival

PARIS, Oct. 12.—(AP.)—The air force at Le Bourget was on its toes today in preparation for receiving the American Girl.

There was a time when arrangements had to be made in advance for sensational landings from abroad, but the officials there have become resigned to the American disregard for red tape and they have been more or less ready for anyone from anywhere ever since Lindbergh dropped out of the sky.

Paris is taking Ruth Elder's flight in the American Girl with all the calmness that befits a city that has experienced several weeks of long feverish frenzies of excitement this year over aviation.

Maid Held In Gem Theft

Diamonds glittered from the chandelier in the home of Cora Harris, 24, Negro woman, 2026 Bedford avenue, until led to her arrest.

Employed as a maid Sunday in the home of William Lando, 2047 Center avenue, she disappeared Tuesday. With her, police say, went $4,000 worth of diamonds and wearing apparel.

Last night detectives found the maid in her home, garbed, they report, in the missing clothes, and a search revealed the diamonds in the chandelier. The girl told police she had given some of the diamonds to her cousins, Jess and William Harris. In the home of Jess Harris, 315 Moris street, a cluster ring was behind a mirror and two small diamond rings were found in the William Harris home, 2909 Carson street, police reported.

CLAIM BALLOTS WERE THROWN INTO SEWER

Prosecution of election frauds at the spring primary of 1926, in the Sixteenth District of the Twenty-second Ward, the ballots of which were declared to have been thrown into a sewer, with Fire Captain Charles Golden listed among the defenants, was begun in Criminal Court today.

The importance of the prosecutions was impressed upon the jury just before the noon recess by Judge Harry H. Rowand, who said:

"This case is of unusual importance and is affected with much public interest. I would caution you not to discuss it with anybody nor permit anybody to discuss it with you or in your presence, and I would ask any of you to report any attempts to discuss it with you."

The first case listed is the charge of false pretense against J. William Bolster, who was majority inspector of the election board, charged with falsely and designedly pretending to the county controller that Charles Carr had acted as a clerk of the board at the primary of May 18, 1926, and the day following collected $10 for the reputed Carr from the controller, whereas Carr had not acted as clerk. It is the contention of the prosecution that Carr does not exist and that a registration under this name was made from a vacant lot.

First Assistant District Attorney Andrew T. Park is prosecuting the case, and the defense is conducted by Benjamin Lencher. The next case is listed for next Tuesday. Alvin Miller, who was judge of election in the district, has not been apprehended.

REED ASSAILS G. O. P. LEADERS

istration of government.

"Equalization of the burden of taxes.

"Repeal of all laws creating special privileges.

"Liberation of honest business from oppressive interference by governmental agents."

Senator Reed said that while his ideas were gained from wide experience in Washington he believed they reflected to some degree the general attitude of the Democratic party.

"CORRUPTION IN SADDLE"

"On the day that Warren G. Harding was inaugurated President corrupt and sinister financial conspiracies to all intents and purposes took possession of the government and have ever since exercised a dominant control," he declared.

"That conspiracy placed Albert B. Fall in charge of the Department of Interior. The President signed an illegal order turning oil lands over to the tender mercies of Fall, who accepted bribes. The scaly hands of the conspirators reached into the Navy Department and corrupted or deceived certain high officials, and the first act of Coolidge was to approve of the Harding administration.

"Harding appointed and Coolidge continued at the head of the Department of Justice Harry M. Daugherty—as vile an insect as ever crawled across the page of time. He consorted with criminals and associated with a grafter and bribe-taker who afterwards committed suicide.

"Coolidge retained Daugherty until the blaze of public indignation grew so hot he was obliged to back away from the fire and then demand Daugherty's resignation upon a minor technicality.

"Mellon, director of 68 corporations, trusts and combinations, whose banks and trust companies were handling securities, was appointed Secretary of the Treasury by Harding and remains in that office today in the teeth of statue 243, which specifically asserts:

"'No person appointed to the office of Secretary of the Treasury shall directly or indirectly be concerned or interested in the purchase or disposal of any public securities of any state or of the United States.'

ASSAILS MELLON

"From the hour Mellon took office he has manipulated or attempted to manipulate every power of the government in the interests of his fiancial confederates. He declared the revenues of the government were so low that a bonus could not be paid to tax soldiers. He compelled Harding to retract his campaign promise in this matter. Immediately afterward Mellon advocated a reduction of $50,000,000 per year on the surplus prouts of the millionaire class. He preferred to serve his wealthy class even though to do so the soldiers who fought for their country must be denied the pittance they sorely needed."

Senator Reed then reviewed the foreign debt question and settlement with France as advocated by Mellon. This, Senator Reed contended, would place a burden of $10,705,000,000 "upon the backs of American people which by every principle of justice should be borne by European nations.'

The return of "lobbyists" to Washington, which he charged during the present administration, was scored by Senator Reed.

"In all the long years of the Coolidge regime," he said, "not a single great trust has been dissolved by operation of law—not a single effective blow struck in favor of the liberation of the commerce of the nation from the control of those who have conspired in the teeth of the statutes of the land.

"Mr. Coolidge does not choose to act.

"That is why I repeat, 'The times are ripe and rotten ripe for change.'"

ONE-TIME HUSBAND

Mrs. Ingram is shown above with Capt. Ingram, whom she married not long after the death of the great tenor. The second husband bears in his arms Mrs. Ingram's child, Gloria Caruso Ingram, heir to the largest share of Caruso's fortune.

THE FAMILY

SOSSONG, WRECK, FREE

William F. Sossong, 62, once influential Carnegie banker, emerged from the county jail late yesterday, weighing 110 pounds. He tipped the scales at 176 when confined in a cell nearly two years ago, charged with embezzlement of nearly $120,000 from the Carnegie Ten-Cent Building and Loan Association and the Carnegie Standard Building and Loan Association.

Penniless now, according to his counsel, he departed on the arm of his daughter, Mrs. Marie Sossong McGann, who has provided a comfortable home for him.

He was paroled by Judge Ambrose B. Reid for the remaining half of a three-year sentence, upon a petition presented in Criminal Court by Attorneys Joseph H. Bialas and T. F. Ryan, joined in by District Attorney Samuel H. Gardner and John P. Volk, state building and loan association examiner, asserting that the imprisonment had seriously affected Sossong's health. Dr. C. J. Ellis, jail physician, certified to the prisoner's failure in health, and Warden John McNeil certified to his exemplary conduct. He was sentenced for three years on March 12, 1926, after spending five months in jail for lack of bail after pleading no defense. A son, Leo F. Sossong, an attorney, is in jail under a four-year sentence for the same charges.

Campbell, superintendent of the parish schools, Pittsburgh diocese, will deliver the invocation, and brief talks will be given by Chapter President Leo A. MacMullin and David M. Martin, chairman of committees.

EIGHT INJURED IN TWO AUTO CRASHES

Two women were in St. John's General Hospital this morning, suffering from serious injuries received when a heavy automobile truck bounded over a curb and struck them, at Chateau and Fayette streets, North Side, late last night.

Mrs. Ella McChesney, 47, of 1225 Warner street, one of the victims, suffered a fracture of the left hip and ankle, and an X-ray examination will be made to determine if her skull is fractured. Mrs. Anna McCall, 39, 1309 Laurel street, suffered severe lacerations, bruises and other injuries.

According to police, a truck driven by John J. Skarupa, 52, of 2687 California avenue, was steered onto the sidewalk to avoid a collision with one driven by Charles H. Hawkins, 28, of 1207 Belasco avenue. Skarupa's truck struck the women. Both drivers were held by police on charges of reckless driving.

Six persons were injured early this morning in a collision between two machines in Beck's Run road, near Agnew lane.

The machines were driven by Michael White, of 2208 Fortes street, and William Chrisholm, of 626 Warrington avenue. Both were arrested on charges of reckless driving after their injuries were dressed. The others injured were Miss Mary Raley and Miss Anna McNutt, both of Chatham street, occupants of Chrisholm's machine, and Leo F. Krieger, of Willock road, Brentwood, and Peter Rankin, of 6 Kirkpatrick street, occupants of White's machine. The men were taken to the South Side Hospital and the girls to Mercy. None were believed to have been injured seriously.

"MISS HUNGARIA, 1927"

FRAULEIN SUZANNE DAVID

"Imitation is the sincerest form of flattery." And those Americans who conceived the beauty pageant idea should feel all puffed up. The reason is Fraulein Suzanne David (above), who recently was selected as Hungary's most typical beauty and was given the title, "Miss Hungaria, 1927."

Alien in Our Jail! How Come? Council Asks

The exclusiveness of Sewickley's jail brought another sprightly session of the borough's council last night, but when it was over, there seemed to have been little or nothing accomplished.

The argument concerned the incarceration of an alien—a Glen Osborne motorist said to have been intoxicated—in the "for Sewickley residents only" jail. Council wanted to know about it, but Police Chief S. Y. McFarland didn't have much information. Anyway, he said, the report that the outsider was locked up was exaggerated. He was just held there temporarily while he posted bond, McFarland said. This, he felt, preserved the honor of the jail.

Constable Ross F. Shaffer of Glenfield, who last week obtained a writ against the burgess of Sewickley to show cause why the jail shouldn't be used for outside prisoners, rattled the skeleton in the closet by declaring after the hearing that the prisoner had been locked up in the station "bull pen."

LABOR PRAISES W. R. HEARST'S SUPPORT

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 12.—The American Federation of Labor convention voted yesterday in unanimous accord on a resolution urging repeal of the Sherman anti-trust law. One paragraph of the resolution lauded the work of William Randolph Hearst when he was a member of the Fifty-fifth Congress from New York. A portion of the resolution read:

"W. R. Hearst, then a representative from New York, on February 18, 1905, introduced a bill to protect trade and commerce against restraints and monopoly, which bill is in fact an anti-monopoly bill designed to apply to prevent monopoly in the products of labor, or of any mineral products or products of the soil or of the sea, and to leave to men and women the right and the opportunity to protect themselves by combinations for mutual aid and protection. . . .

"Resolved, that we demand the immediate repeal of the Sherman anti-trust law . . . and promptly enact in its place the anti-monopoly bill introduced in the Fifty-eighth Congress by W. R. Hearst."

DAVIDSON BACKS CONCERTS

"The Pittsburgh Orchestra Association is doing a practical service toward the musical education of Pittsburgh," said Dr. William M. Davidson, superintendent of schools, announcing the sale at a special price of season tickets to the orchestra concerts to Pittsburgh school teachers and high school students, as well as other groups.

"The association is bringing to Pittsburgh the best orchestras of the country and is setting before the people the highest standards for the cultivation of musical taste." He said. "The appearance of the Boston Symphony Orchestra which opens the season here November 5, three concerts by the New York Philharmonic, the New York Symphony, the Cleveland and Minneapolis orchestras, all under conductors of world-wide reputation, provide programs which deserve 100 per cent support of our music patrons."

On Monday 1,000 tickets were offered to high school students at $1.75 for the seven concerts.

ERIE'S BOOTLEG KING STARTS ATLANTA TERM

ERIE, Pa., Oct. 12.—Stanley Dobkowski, Erie's reputed bootleg king, was committed to the Atlanta Federal penitentiary today to begin serving a 21-month sentence for violating the dry laws. He was convicted at the recent term of Federal Court here. On his release from Atlanta he will begin a six-month sentence in the Allegheny county workhouse.

POLICEMAN ACCUSED BY WOMAN

William Barusola, 35, of 317 Princeton place, a traffic policeman, was fined $25 and turned over to the police trial board in Morals Court today on a charge of indecent behavior. The prosecutor was Mrs. Elizabeth Kinne, 2339 Freemont street, Beechview, who charged Barusola insulted her at Seventh avenue and Bigelow boulevard, where he was on duty yesterday.

Barusola, intoxicated, according to Mrs. Kinne's testimony, grabbed her by the arm as she attempted to cross Seventh avenue with a baby in her arms, became abusive and ordered her not to cross until he told her to. Traffic, at the time, she says, was crossing Seventh avenue. She says he took her to a patrol box to summon the wagon, but, evidently changing his mind, released her. While she waited to get his badge number, she charges, he left his post to go to a house on Seventh avenue, where a woman handed him a drink.

Barusola was arrested on Mrs. Kinne's charges at 5:30 yesterday and was immediately suspended by Traffic Inspector Benjamin R. Marshall, pending a hearing. Intoxication while on duty is the charge on which the police board will try him. Magistrate A. D. Brandom in Morals Court today said he would recommend his dismissal.

Barusola has been a member of the police force for eight years.

PRESENT WATCH TO MURRAY

Before leaving for Detroit, Mich., last night, where he will report today for special duty in the prohibition department, Capt. B. W. Murray, who has been assistant administrator in charge of the enforcement unit in the division under the jurisdiction of Administrator John D. Pennington, was presented with a gold watch and chain by the members of the enforcement unit.

The transfer came as a surprise, but it was said it will place him in line for promotion. He succeeded Thomas J. Cavanaugh as chief of the enforcement division two years ago, when the latter was transferred to Philadelphia.

Women Rush Session To Give Coolidge Hall

Five hundred members of the State Federation of Pennsylvania Women are hurrying through sessions in Carnegie Music Hall today preparatory to moving to Memorial Hall tomorrow to make way for President Coolidge, who will occupy the center of the stage in the Music Hall. The big press and publicity exhibit which occupied one end of the Music Hall foyer is being removed to make room for the Institute Founder's Day banquet tables, to be laid there.

Officers and directors of the Federation were guests at 8 o'clock this morning at a breakfast given by the Carrick Mothers' Club in the clubhouse, Spokane avenue. Reports occupied the morning session and on this afternoon's program Gifford Gordon's address on "Is Prohibition a Success?" was the chief event. The convention dinner will be held tonight in McCreery's.

"There is nothing in history to compare with the subtle process of moral disintegration going on in Soviet Russia, said the Rev. Edmund A. Walsh, vice president of Georgetown University, in his address before the convention yesterday afternoon. Marriage, said Father Walsh, is merely legalized polygamy and polyandry, and 7,000,000 children are roaming the streets with no concept of morality or authority. Frank C. Harper spoke on "The Newspaper and the Community." Dr. Charles Heinroth gave a short organ recital and Mrs. Lucille Miller Werner sang, accompanied by Miss Carolyn Gray.

In his talk last night on the convention theme, "Beauty and Its Application to Everyday Life," the Rev. Dr. Percy G. Kammerer, said: "The greatest application of beauty to everyday life that we can make is to endeavor to think and feel in a manner that may be convincingly beautiful." Music was by Mrs. Christine Haskell, pianist; Arthur B. Jennings, organist, and Case Ward Whitney, baritone.

ONE NIGHT 3 WELL-BRED YOUNG MEN WHO WERE ENTERTAINED AT THE BEST HOUSES WHEREVER THEY WENT, STARTED OUT TO WRECK A COLLEGE TOWN
THEY LICKED 2 HACKMEN, SET FIRE TO AN AWNING, PULLED DOWN MANY SIGNS, AND SENT A BRICK THRU THE WINDOW OF A TAILOR SHOP—
A COP, HEARING THE RACKET, ASSUMED THAT THEY WERE DRUNKEN RUFFIANS AND SPOKE HARSHLY TO THEM—
HIS TONE AND MANNER IRRITATED THE COLLEGE MEN WHO DISLIKED RUDENESS IN MENIALS THEY SAID THEY WERE GENTLEMEN AND COULD PAY FOR EVERYTHING THEY BROKE—

WENTZ AIM IS TO AID CRIPPLES

If the recent baseball landslide did nothing else for Pittsburgh's citizenry—and there are substantial indications that it didn't—at least it served to remind the people that such a person as Lew Wentz existed very largely in the affairs of Oklahoma.

Mr. Wentz counts his nickels now in dollars. Some 16 years ago it was different. He was a native of Pittsburgh then—high school baseball coach. On a large field on part of which West Penn Hospital now stands in Bloomfield, Lew Wentz coached aspiring youngsters in the secrets of a low, sharp curve and spent his nights in the vicinity of his modest home in Duquesne Heights. His pay was $150 a month, his neighbors tell.

Lew Wentz came back to Pittsburgh for the world series and the papers reported the gossip that he might buy the Pirates. He was sitting in his rooms in the William Penn Hotel telling a reporter with all sincerity, "Gee! I'd like to have those Pirates, but Barney won't sell," when a bellboy drew aside the newspaperman and revealed: "Say, he used to be a neighbor o' mine up on Duquesne Heights. He didn't have an extra dime then. Now look at the dough he's got. Millions! He was a regular guy, though. He certainly knows his oil."

With all of his so-called "dough," Lew Wentz rightfully resents the image that the public prints have set up of him—that he stepped into Oklahoma at night and awoke the next day with so many millions in his lap.

"I suppose," he supposes, "the newspapers have to do that—fix it up a little. If they told the ice-cold truth it wouldn't be interesting. They forget all those years you work."

Lew Wentz has been in Oklahoma 16 years. Ten years ago things started "looking up" for him. The direction hasn't changed.

"I'll tell you," he said, "if you want to quote me about something, tell 'em what Pennsylvania's doing for crippled children. I'm interested a great deal in that back home, you know, and when I came here the society here got in touch with me. And I was surprised how much good work they're doing."

"I get three kinds of letters," he explains. "Business, personal and the gimmes—these"—and he pointed to a bundle—"are the gimme letters." The description might be unkind except that the speaker answers more than his share of those letters.

LEW TELLS FRED HOW

LEW WENTZ AND FRED CLARKE

Former Pittsburgher Lew Wentz now owns Fred Clarke, erstwhile manager of the Pirates, as a neighbor in Oklahoma. Lew left Pittsburgh 16 years ago with a smile and came back the other day smiling at reports that his income tax annually exceeds $1,000,000. He knows a thing or two about the oil business.

Aimee McPherson Passes From Headlines So "The Glory Girl" Goes Out As Box Office Movie

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS,
Motion Picture Editor of Universal Service.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 10.

AN OLD man, with a sense of humor, once said: "I have lived a long time, and my greatest worries have never happened." That's what Luther Reed, Esther Ralston and others at Paramount can say.

They were all worried over "The Glory Girl," schdeuled for Miss Ralston's next picture. It was written at the time Aimee McPherson, the evangelist, was occupying front pages. Since that time, other happenings have crowded Mrs. McPherson off the front page.

After all the weeks of worry, the powers that be at Paramount-Famous-Lasky's say thumbs down on "The Glory Girl," for the present at least, and substitute "The Jazz Orphan," with Frank Tuttle directing. "The Jazz Orphan," we are told, is only a temporary title in case you have any objections. It is written by Florence Ryerson, well-known writer, with Doris Anderson writing the continuity.

Miss Ryerson, by the way, has been signed by Paramount. She has just finished a two and a half year contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, so she should know her "onions," if you will pardon my rough language.

I'm getting so I can pronounce these foreign names without batting an eyelash. These days it is part of every motion picture editor's education not only to know how to pronounce these names, but to be able to spell them. The latest addition to Hollywood is Olga VacLanoba, who will play the Duchess of Josiana in "The Man Who Laughs." Miss VacLanoba is a Morris Gest discovery and was brought to this country when the Moscow Art Theater had its vogue. She played "Carmen" and later played the nun in "The Miracle."

A newcomer to Marion Davies' set is Lawrence Gray, who is there to play one of the principal male roles. "The Patsy" has progressed from the dinner table to the living room and Marion isn't shedding any tears. She ate so much ice cream she says she can't even look at an advertisement of ice cream without getting nervous. As for Marie Dressler, she says no one need feed her soap or ice cream. It's been done once too often.

I hear it whispered, not very loud, to be sure, but strong enough to be worthy of a line, that Douglas Fairbanks' picture, "The Gaucho," will follow "The King of Kings" into Grauman's Chinese Theater. After talking with Sid Grauman, I might have known this would happen. Sometimes I am dumb. However, let me tell it myself.

You'd never suspect the quiet, scholarly F. W. Murnau of realizing the value of American publicity so soon. I was amused to read in a special dispatch that Mr. Murnau in an interview given in New York, stated that he expected to join a traveling circus before he came to Hollywood. His next picture, "The Four Devils," has a circus background. I wonder if Winfield Sheehan knows of his plans? "Winnie," by the way, returned to town with 20 wire-haired terriers and police dogs. He was so busy getting them settled in their new home in Beverly Hills that he didn't officially start work until the day following his arrival in California.

If Henry Victor cared to write an article, he can head it "What America Did for Me." He writes to friends to say that when he returned to his native England after his experience as a motion picture actor in America, he was received with open arms. He has been starred in two pictures. The first of these, "The Luck of the Navy," made for Graham Wilcox, is to go out as a special.

Monte Blue is going on a vacation. I thought he had one a few weeks ago at Catalina, but I am told that wasn't a vacation—he was on location. Anyway, he and his wife are bound for New York, where Monte is going on a spree of theater-going. If he finds any plays he likes, he says he'll buy them himself.

Bennie Holzman sends me a telegram which states: "Andrew Rice did not write material for last George White 'Scandals.' Material was written by William K. Green, B. G. De Sylva and Lew Brown. George White would appreciate deeply your denying story which appeared in your column in New York." All right, Bennie, I'm the kind of a girl who likes to oblige. If it makes George White any happier, here goes the correction. I only took the word of the Fox Film Company. That shows a girl can be too gullible and believe everything she's told.

JACK HOLT, FILM STAR, UNDERGOES OPERATION

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 12.—An operation for throat and nasal troubles was performed on Jack Holt, film actor. It is expected he will be able to leave the hospital within a fortnight. It was stated he also will receive treatment for his spine, injured recently in a fall from a horse.

Piute Indian Band Lends Realism to "Ramona"

A band of Piute Indians were employed by Ed Carewe to furnish realism in the action of "Ramona" while on location at Cedar Breaks, Zion National Park, and other scenic spots in Southern Utah.

The Indians were engaged at a reservation near Cedar City, and according to historical experts, are exact prototypes of the Temecula Indians described by Helen Hunt Jackson in the original novel "Ramona," on which the Carewe photoplay is based.

Not so many years ago, statistics show that there were more than 100,000 of these redmen in this territory. Late reports offer the information that only 2,000 remain.

"Ramona" is Dolores Del Rio's starring photo-drama, which Carewe and Inspiration Pictures, Inc., are producing jointly for United Artists release.

Warner Baxter, as "Alleandro," the Indian lover, is head of the tribe, and his resemblance while in makeup to the hired Piutes is remarkable.

Woman Athlete in "The Fair Co-Ed" Company

Lillian Copeland, acclaimed the most famous woman athlete in the world and holder of the international shotput, discus and javelin championship, is in the cast of Marion Davies' new starring production, "The Fair Co-ed."

Miss Copeland, who is a freshman at the University of Southern California law school, won the title of champion all-around woman athlete of the world in 1925. Last year she retained the title against all contenders at the Sesqui-Centennial celebration at Philadelphia.

A member of the Pasadena Athletic and Country Club crack basketball team, which holds the championship of the world in that particular sport, coached a number of the basketball players in Miss Davies' new picture.

COMEDY, MELODY NEXT WEEK

In the cast that will present "The Medicine Man" in the Pitt next week, and for which seats are now on sale, are Minor Watson, Howard Lang, Neil McPee, John Daly Murphy, Stephen Zebrock, Mayo Methot, Moffat Johnston, William Johnston and Clyde North. Matinees Thursday and Saturday will prevail in this Theater throughout the season.

The Marx Brothers, in "The Cocoanuts," are coming to the Nixon next week. Irving Berlin has turned out its score of jazz music. The Marx Brothers, except "Harpo," who plays a dumb role, sing and dance and they will be seen in a new version of the Charleston. George S. Kaufman wrote the book.

"Artists and Models," coming to the Alvin next week, is said to be exceptionaly strong on comedy. To this is combined speed with which the fifty scenes moves. The seat sale opens tomorrow.

In the Keith-Albee vaudeville program in the Davis next week, will be the three wirlwinds acrobats on roller skates. The photoplay will be Esther Ralston in "Figures Don't Lie."

FRAUD REVEALED IN 20 OUT OF 23 BALLOT BOXES

Out of 23 ballot boxes inspected under court order since the primary, only two or three have failed to reveal irregularities in vote counting. The special committee headed by Ward Bonsall, checking the boxes, made this announcement yesterday when it recessed until next Monday.

One of the last boxes checked, according to a report made by the committee, revealed alterations to 200 ballots and many other irregularities. This box is from the Twenty-ninth district of the Fourteenth Ward. The majority of the irregularities were erasures and marking of crosses opposite the names of candidates by persons other than those casting the ballot, but in addition many irregularities in totaling were disclosed, the report stated.

By the time the commitee resumes checking the boxes, many more will have been brought in, investigators of the Allegheny County Election Association announced.

Modern Life Hurts Mathematics

SCHOOLBOYS of twenty years ago were better mathematicians than those of today, according to an eminent educationist. He states that the present-day pupils have too many distractions.

Too Many "Frills" to Education

THERE are too many "frills" in education, said a member of the English Board of Education. He agreed to a great extent to limiting the training more to the "three R's" and domestic instruction.

LISTEN WORLD

By ELSIE ROBINSON

Two Groups of Women

I AM thinking of two groups of women.

The first group used to meet once a week in the church parlors, when I was a girl, to "do Ladies' Aid" work for the poor of the parish. They were all good women, hard working, highly respected, most of them mothers of families.

At that time they all seemed very old to me, and peculiarly alike, with the same withered color and contour. I realize now they were not very old. Their ages must have ranged from 35 to 45. They were all intelligent, several of them could have been beautiful. But I'm sure it never occurred to them.

They seemed to have accepted a uniform drabness and a certain flabbiness of spirit as the normal status of married women over 30. They also accepted ill health. Indeed, they seemed to find a certain dramatic interest in having numerous novel and acute ailments. They were always telling each other about their symptoms and operations. Some of them had Sinking Spells. I never discovered what made them sink. They just sank. But there was always a good deal of excitement when these spells happened.

They took a great deal of patent medicine but, outside of that, I never heard of any sustained effort to put themselves in good condition. Many of them were overweight and suffered from fallen arches. But they did not diet, exercises were unknown. One young married woman was an exception. She went in for Delsarte and it was darkly hinted that she swung Indian clubs and dumbbells in the wood shed. She had even been seen in bloomers, sprinting around the bicycle track in the early morning. The Ladies' Aid sniffed when she was mentioned. They wouldn't have dreamed of asking her advice on any serious matter.

I had tea with the other group of women recently, at the Country Club. It was a Saturday afternoon—they had all been swimming, golfing or hiking and they were glowing freshly from their showers. They are all successful professional women—in age between 35 and 50—most of them wives and mothers. They work tremendously hard, at a speed and concentration which would have horrified their mothers. Every minute of their time is scheduled, from the second they dash into their showers at 6:30 a. m., until they wipe off the last fleck of cleansing cream at midnight. Yet, in spite of their heavy responsibilities and strenuous programs, they are all superbly fit.

They make a religion of Keeping Fit. They feel that they owe this not only to themselves, but to their families and communities. It must be a great nuisance to them at times. They must feel the inevitable longing to "let down" and indulge themselves which comes to all women over 40, but they do not let down. They subject themselves to the most rigid discipline, and they limit their sleep and their food and their emotional indulgence. They consider self-pity as deadly as pyorrhoea, and hysteria more offensive than halitosis. They will not allow themselves to become seedy, mentally or physically, any more than they would allow themselves to become drunk.

They spoke of a mutual acquaintance who had "nervous prostration."

"What on earth was she thinking of to let herself get into that condition," they said with contempt thinly veiled with sympathy.

WHAT'S THE ANSWER?

1. What is a light year?
2. When the flag is displayed in a manner other than by being flown from a staff, should the blue field be to the observers' right or left?
3. What does the word "cossack" mean?
4. What was the Apis?
5. Who chose as his own epitaph, "Here lies one whose name was writ in water"?
6. Who is the "March King"?
7. Is hair living above the roots?
8. What is the origin of the phrase "Get your goat"?
9. What leader of the English Episcopal church became converted to Roman Catholicism and became a Catholic cardinal at the age of 79?
10. Who was Johnny Appleseed?

The answers to these questions may be found in tomorrow's paper.

Here are the answers to yesterday's questions.

1. The difference between warm and cold-blooded animals is merely a difference of bodily temperature. Cold-blooded creatures, such as frogs and fishes, have a body temperature only slightly above that of the surrounding atmosphere. Higher up the evolutionary scale the body temperature varies with different animals.

2. There have been only seven full-fledged generals in the American Army since the signing of the Declaration of Independence. They were Washington, Grant, Sherman, Sheridan, Pershing, Bliss and March.

3. Thomas Nast originated the symbols of donkey and elephant for the Republican and Democratic parties.

4. In ancient Rome, a centurion was a commander of a century, or company. There were 60 centuries in a legion.

5. The large hairs on either side of a cat's nose are feelers. They enable the animal to find its way with ease through a dark narrow passage.

6. Sound travels about four and one-half times as fast in water as it does in air.

7. Common stock is ordinary capital stock not sharing in the privileges of preferred stock. Preferred stock is stock which draws a dividend before other capital stock.

8. Alderman was a name given by the Anglo-Saxons to the governor of a county. The aldermen were replaced by earls (counts) but the name continues to designate the municipal officers of cities.

9. The quotation reads "Blessed are the peace-makers; for they shall be called the children of God." (Matt. v:9.)

10. The Washington Elm stood northwest of the common in Cambridge, Mass. It was near this old elm, according to tradition, that Gen. Washington assumed command of the Continental Army on July 3, 1775. It fell in 1923.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

by Royal S. Copeland M.D.
U.S. Senator from New York

Pure Air the First Essential to Human Life

IN the same newspaper I saw two statements. This is the first one:

"Great masses of bacteria thrive without oxygen. Many of the higher forms endure without it for greater or lesser periods of time during suspended animation. With the human organism three minutes without a supply of oxygen spells death."

DR. COPELAND

In another part of the paper was an interview with a park and tree expert who has been studying the causes for tree deaths in Central Park, New York. This is a part of what he said:

"The city grew up and overwhelmed the park, cutting off the natural breezes, overloading the air with gasses and supplying enormous quantities of soot to to settle on the leaf pores of the plants."

When you stop to think about it, these are significant statements. They should be pondered by every thinking person.

The lowest forms of life, the bacteria of certain types, can live without oxygen. Man cannot. Why?

Man has a complicated nervous system. Our brains and nerves cannot function without oxygen. The low forms of life have no such structures.

The first effect of shortage of oxygen is felt by the highest nerve center. Since these are not found in the bacteria, they don't care whether they have oxygen or not.

How do we get oxygen? We get it through the air in which we live and which we breathe into the lungs. Without an abundance of pure air we cannot thrive and without oxygen we cannot live.

If the air we breathe is loaded with soot, smoke and dust, our lungs are filled with irritating and harmful substances, instead of life-giving oxygen. Just as the gases and soot harm the trees, they harm us. Our tissues are damaged just as much as the tissues of the trees, but the greater vitality of man helps him to overcome the effects.

If you could see how a lung looks that has been breathing in coal dust, you would make greater efforts to escape from bad air. The coal miner has a lung made almost black by the intakes of coal dust. The normal tissue is changed into a hard, almost stony mass.

It is important for millers, stone masons, metal grinders, and all others working in trades where dust abounds, to take great pains to guard against breathing in the loaded atmosphere. This is almost impossible to avoid, but every effort should be made to shield the breathing machinery against this harmful sort of air.

The head of every household should see to it that free ventilation is had. Not only must we have oxygen, but we must have it day and night, all the time. Health and long life depend upon it.

MEDITATIONS of a MARRIED WOMAN

by HELEN ROWLAND

WHY THE TIRED BUSINESS GIRL MARRIES

WHEN a middle-aged man marries, asserts a popular writer, it is not in order to escape loneliness, but in order to achieve it! He is looking, not for a soul-mate, but for a good alibi—a shield and barrier between him and all the poachers, time-wasters and pests, including women.

This is a little startling; but, after all, if it is true of the Busy Business Man, it may be true also of the Tired Business Woman.

* * *

Why does a successful modern business woman exchange her freedom, her independence and the attentions of a lot of men for the inattention of just ONE?

HELEN ROWLAND

With a good income, a ducky little apartment, a snappy little car, and plenty of good clothes, good friends and good times, why does she so often annex a man?

Does SHE, too, seek an alibi and a "rest cure?"

After all! "My husband thinks, says, wants, will or won't" is as good an alibi as "My wife won't let me!"

* * *

Just the magic words "My husband" spoken in the right tone, will put every other man in his place—from the amorous employer to the snippy elevator boy.

After a hard day at the office, it is far easier to go home and listen to one man's monosyllables than to go out and listen to a lot of men's applesauce.

It is far easier to cater to one set of habits and idiosyncrasies all the time than to have to live up to a different man's ideals every evening.

* * *

It is far more comforting to have one man around who understands you, than to jazz around with a lot of men, most of whom bore you.

* * *

This business of keeping marcelled, made-up and "peppy," keeping up with the game, keeping on the go, keeping engagements and keeping a list of admirers, gets SO tiresome, after a while!

* * *

It's nice and cozy and restful and relaxing to have someone around, for whom you don't have to scintillate and sparkle and keep your nose powdered; to whom you don't have to play houri and vamp and "Wonder Woman."

* * *

Of course, an ideal husband should be an inspiration, a partner and a soul-mate. But, falling short of that, almost ANY fairly good husband is a "rest cure!"

You don't have to hide the worry-wrinkles, or the little puffs under the eyes, or the gray hairs sneaking out here and there, from a husband. You don't have to keep him guessing! He knows, he knows, HE knows! He has your NUMBER; and if he is still fond of you and companionable, he's as much of a stimulant as you need after a hard day at the office.

* * *

Single-blessedness is not half so blessed as it sounds or looks!..

TOMORROW'S HOROSCOPE

Thursday, October 13

ALTHOUGH there may be some setbacks or postponements necessary in the undertakings for this day, yet there is much encouragement found among the lunar operations.

These especially favor matters connected with inventions, science and those promotions centering on the subtler forces in nature. But beware of underhand machinations and intrigues. Finances are in fortunate shape.

Those whose birthday it is are under excellent prospect for a financially good year, with certain activities under stimulus, but there may be slight obstacles or delays and there is danger of intrigue and subtle attack.

A child born on this day may be ambitious and large minded, with a constructive talent for research and invention relating to the finer forces in nature. But it may have a leaning to be subject to subtlety or stratagem in its dealings.

As an astringent

Have you tried Listerine as an astringent? It's a pleasure you won't forget. And if you've been buying expensive astringents you'll appreciate the saving Listerine affords you.

Listerine exhilarates your skin like nothing you've ever known—a natural astringent that contracts pores, and leaves the skin feeling soft, pliable and youthful. Thousands of women use it either diluted or full strength in preference to astringents costing from two to five times as much.

You may be committed to some favorite yet we ask you to try Listerine this way once. We'll wager you'll like it.

Perhaps you'd be interested in receiving our handy little free book of etiquette. Just write for it to the Lambert Pharmacal Company, Dept. L-8, 2101 Locust Street, St. Louis, Mo.

Duchess of Sutherland Feted by Mrs. Hearst

By CHOLLY KNICKERBOCKER,
Universal Service Society Editor.

NEW YORK, Oct. 12.—The tall and stately Lady Millicent Hawes, who is better known as the Duchess of Sutherland and who confessed with amazement the other evening that the bellhops at the Barclay, where she has been making her headquarters during her New York visit, refer to her as "Mrs. Hawes," was the honored guest at a large dinner party given last evening by Mrs. William Randolph Hearst at 127 Riverside Drive.

Lady Millicent was only 17 at the time of her marriage to the late Duke of Sutherland and her mother, the Countess of Rosslyn, still takes a keen and active interest in English society despite her advanced years. Early last August Lady Millicent came to America to visit Elisabeth Marbury at her camp in Maine. She plans to sail for the other side of the Atlantic on the Ile de France October 21 and will spend the winter at her home in France, returning to New York in the spring. Lady Millicent, under the name "Millicent Sutherland" has written many books and short stories. She recently completed a play which probably will be seen on Broadway before the close of the present season.

Reginald Fellowes and Mrs. Fellowes and the Princess Murat—who must not be confused with the former Miss Stallo—were among Mrs. Hearst's guests, as were the junior Anthony J. Drexel Biddles, Vincent Astor, Mr. and Mrs. "Josh" Cosden, Mrs. Charles Cary Rumsey, Mrs. Raymond T. Baker (the former Mrs. Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt), "Doc" and Fifi Widener Holden, the Julian M. Gerards, "Ned" and Barbara Locw Post, Mrs. Sherman McCallum, Mrs. Epps Hawes, "Tommy" Hitchcock, Jr., hero of the recent international polo matches at Meadowbrook; James McVickar, Lytle Hull, "Winnie" Burden, George Moore, Charles Amory, Julius Wentworth Noyes and "Larry" Doyle.

Following dinner there was dancing and an exhibition of motion pictures.

WELLIVER GOES TO WASHINGTON

By Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12.—Beginning with today's issue of the Washington Herald its editorial direction will be in the hands of Judson C. Welliver.

Mr. Welliver's return to active newspaper work in Washington is an event of real interest to the people of the Capital City, who for many years followed his writings on political, economic and general public affairs, as a member of the staff of the Washington Times.

He spent two years as London correspondent of the New York Sun during the war. Returning, he was drafted into an important participation in management of the Harding Presidential campaign of 1920.

After his election, Mr. Harding made Mr. Welliver a member of his staff at the White House. Mr. Welliver comes to Washington from Pittsburgh, where, as editor, he helped to launch the Post-Gazette, the result of the recent consolidation of the Post and the Gazette Times.

DRUGS EXCITE THE KIDNEYS, DRINK WATER

The American men and women must guard constantly against kidney trouble because we often eat too much rich food. Our blood is filled with acids which the kidneys strive to filter out; they weaken from overwork, become sluggish, the eliminative tissues clog and the result is kidney trouble, bladder weakness and a general decline in health.

When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead; your back hurts or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night; if you suffer with sick headache, or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach, or if you have rheumatism when the weather is bad, begin drinking lots of good soft water and get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts. Take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine.

This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help flush and stimulate clogged kidneys, to neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer are a source of irritation, thus often relieving bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink and belongs in every home, because nobody can make a mistake by having a good kidney flushing any time.

IN DESPAIR OVER PIMPLY, RED SKIN

ITCHED AND BURNED—UGLY TO LOOK AT

Healed at last, quickly and easily

Charlotte, Mich., Oct. 21:—"I have been a sufferer from a most unsightly skin disorder, my face being full of pimples and blackheads and my complexion was very muddy. It was very ugly to look at as it was red and firey and it annoyed me by itching and burning. I tried many treatments, but got no relief. When I was a small baby I had eczema on my body and my mother used Resinol Ointment on it and she recommended it to me at this time. In desperation I decided to send for a sample of Resinol. After using the sample I bought more Resinol as I was convinced it was a splendid remedy. After I had applied it four times, the pimples began to heal and at the end of two weeks they had entirely disappeared. Now, I have such confidence in Resinol Ointment I would not be without it." TO PUT ON FIRM FLESH
Increase Energy—Make Red Blood

Thin, nervous or run-down folks will find this simple test well worth trying: First, weigh yourself and measure yourself. Next take Mastin's Yeast VITAMON—two tablets with every meal. Then weigh and measure yourself again each week and continue taking Mastin's VITAMON regularly until you are satisfied with your gain in weight, firm flesh, strength, nerve force, "pep," energy and improved appearance.

Mastin's VITAMON Tablets contain highly concentrated yeast-vitamines as well as the other important vitamines, all of which Science says you must have to be strong, well and fully developed. They are now being used by thousands who appreciate their convenience, economy and quick results.

By increasing the nourishing power of what you eat, Mastin's VITAMON Tablets supply just what your body needs to feed the shrunken tissues, strengthen internal organs, clear the skin and renew shattered nerve force without upsetting the stomach or causing gas.

Pimples, boils and skin eruptions seem to vanish as if by magic under their healthful, purifying influence. But it is not only a question of how much better you look and feel, or what your friends say and think—the scales and tape measure will tell their own story. A two weeks' test will surprise you.

IMPORTANT! While the remarkable health-building value of Mastin's VITAMON Tablets has been clearly and positively demonstrated in cases of lack of energy, nervous troubles, anaemia, indigestion, constipation, skin eruptions, poor complexion and a generally weakened physical and mental condition, they should not be used by anyone who OBJECTS to having their weight increased to normal, so rapid and amazing are the results that success is absolutely guaranteed or the small price you pay will be promptly refunded and the trial will cost you nothing. Be sure to remember the name Mastin's VI-TA-MON—the original and genuine yeast-vitamine tablet—there is nothing else like it, so do not accept imitations or substitutes. You can get Mastin's VITAMON Tablets at all good druggists, such as May Drug Co. Stores all over Pittsburgh.

if it isn't MASTINS it isn't VITAMON

Mrs. T. C. Wilson and Miss Evelyn Groah Hostesses at Country Club Luncheon

MRS. THOMAS CARLYLE WILSON, of Teece avenue, Bellevue, and Miss Evelyn Dorothy Groah, of Dawson avenue, Bellevue, were hostesses this afternoon at a luncheon in the Highland Country Club, with covers laid for 130 guests. MISS MARY LANDON BAKER

With two of her most ardent suitors trailing her over the continent, Mary Landon Baker, in Venice, continues to contradict rumors that she intends to marry one of them. Mary, you may recall, is the Chicago who jilted young Allister McCormick, Chicago millionaire on the eve of their wedding. The men in the case are the young Duke of Leeds and the handsome Maj. Peto, who was divorced by the Duchess of Rutland. Another report says the erstwhile secretary of the Serbian legation in Washington, Bojadur Puritsch, will make his residence in Rome, where Miss Baker and the two other suitors are expected soon. M. Puritsch followed Mary abroad last winter when she went to Paris.

The Life and Letters of WOODROW WILSON

Wilson's Trust in and Dependence on His Wife

At First Husband and Wife Doubted the Wisdom of Their Step, But in Complete Partnership Found Satisfaction

Although Woodrow Wilson was convinced of his genius for political leadership, he resolved that his public service should take the form of teaching his ideas and ideals of government, as told in yesterday's installment of "The Life and Letters of Woodrow Wilson" in the Sun-Telegraph. One compelling reason for the decision was his necessity for earning a living for himself and wife. Their marriage was described by Biographer Baker yesterday.

Early Married Life

WOODROW WILSON, like his bride, had had compunctions about the advisability of their marriage.

"Sometimes I think . . . that I have done you a very questionable service in preparing for you a life with a man of a sensitive, restless, overwrought disposition like mine," he had written to Ellen Axson early in 1885. "I hope that you will continue to be blind to the sacrifice you are making."

Or he asks:

"Do you think . . . that you will have the courage to promise to 'obey' a man who will be forever insisting upon your hearing his views of the world many times every day—a man of restless, unappeasable ambition to produce something worthy of the world's reading, and bent, meantime, upon compelling you to hear and pass judgment upon what he does in the progress of the adventure?"

There have been long discussions of her own work as an artist—a "woman's right to live her own life"—and of the intense desire she had to be of "some service to the world." While an art student in New York she had taken a class in the old Spring Street Presbyterian Church, a tenement neighborhood of poor people, to do what she considered a "plain service to humanity."

Finds "True Self" in Love

He argues passionately with her upon this subject:

"I don't wonder that you can have no sympathy with the false talk about a woman's right to live her own life. . . .

"It is not peculiar to women, my darling, 'to fail to find contentment in living for themselves.' Men are quite as unable to satisfy themselves with self-service. True-hearted men are quite as far as true-hearted women from craving the privilege of 'living their own lives.' They all, consciously or unconsciously, testify to the truth of Hegel's beautiful conception, that they can find their true selves only in the love and devotion of family life.

"And now, Ellen, you can see the true source of my impatience with the opinion which has served as the text for this long dissertation. It is a pernicious falsehood, because it contains so much truth. Its untruth is unspoken. It lies in the implied judgment as to what woman's 'own life' should be—in intimating that she has by right a life apart. Fortunately, love asserts itself quite independently of such crude beliefs! When I come to lecture on the history of society at Bryn Mawr I shall make some remarks upon the principles lying at the foundation of the institution of the family which, mayhap, will be hard to forget."

There are still other, more practical doubts. They had almost no money!

"Now, I expect to have about $500 in all to get married on, and since we shall both of us have to be wanderers during the summer anyhow, why shouldn't we wander together? Would it not be the very best of plans to find some quiet, unfashionable place to board and spend July and August—or part of them—off to ourselves somewhere? At any rate, we might lose ourselves to the rest of the world for five or six weeks and spend the rest of the time visiting our friends . . . Having had no experience (!) in getting married I can't tell very clearly how much of the $500 will remain after the ceremony; but I should think quite enough for any modest, economical plan."

All these doubts and hesitations are dissolved now in the honeymoon cottage at Arden, whither they have gone after the wedding on June 24, 1885. They have begun with nothing in the world but hope—and the promise of the position at Bryn Mawr, for which Wilson was to receive $1,500 a year.

Intellectual Loneliness

It is difficult to over-emphasize the determining importance of Wilson's marriage. A tempestuous, sensitive, imperious, highly wrought nature, at heart lonely and repressed, it is not too much to say that he found in his wife the "polar center" of his existence. He himself, none better, recognized his dependence, and gloried in it. In a letter to Ellen Axson, written May 15, 1885, he says:

"Have you forgotten your own quotation from Hamerton: 'It is not by adding to our knowledge, but by understanding us, that women are our helpers? The intellectual life is sometimes a fearfully solitary one. Unless he lives in a great capital'—and generally even when he does live in such a center—'the man devoted to that life is more than all other men liable to suffer from isolation, to feel utterly alone . . . Give him one friend who can understand him, who will not leave him, who will always be accessible by day and night—one friend, one kindly listener, just one, and the whole universe is changed. It is deaf and indifferent no longer, and whilst she listens, it seems as if all men and angels listened also, so perfectly his thoughts is mirrored in the light of her answering eyes.' "

Even more poignantly he makes his confession:

"It isn't pleasant or convenient to have strong passions . . . I have the uncomfortable feeling that I am carrying a volcano about with me. My salvation is in being loved . . .

"There surely never lived a man with whom love was a more critical matter than it is with me!"

Trusts Her Utterly

He can trust her utterly with all his faults, his ambitions, his hopes, his aspirations. "I am, as you have no doubt found out for yourself, an excessively proud and sensitive creature;" he is "ignorant of women," he is "shut up in his own heart," he is "too intense," he is full of the "sadness doubtless natural in a person of passionate loves and hatreds, but sadness for all that," he has a kind of "terrible ambition," and yet rising above it all, commanding his whole life, is a passion of idealism and aspiration, a power of concentrated effort. He has, he tells her, a "longing to do immortal works." I want to know the world; to retain all my sympathy with it—even with its crudeness." He will know "only the best," strive "only for the highest!" He feels within him powerful latent gifts of leadership; he will school all of his powers and passions "for the work of establishing the principles" he believed in. He is full of the "glow and enthusiasm" of his high purpose!

All this he is and he brings to their marriage an utter confidence: "Until you loved me I used to be tormented with 'uneasy questionings' about everything in my future; now I am uneasy about nothing in that future." His letters, indeed, bear a thousand evidence of his dependence upon her and of her steady affection.

"You know I am naturally extremely reserved. It would be a sheer impossibility for me to confide anything concerning only myself—especially any secret of my intellect—to any one of whose sympathy I could not be absolutely sure beforehand."

Complete Partnership

From the very beginning she enters into his work with the complete spirit of partnership. Her letters are full of her strength and sweetness. They are beautiful, sensible letters, smiling sometimes at his intensity and seriousness, patient with his assumptions of command in matters upon which she was better able to judge than he, encouraging him when he is desponding, sharing intensely in his triumphs. She is clearly wiser in the world of living men than he—the common, homely world—with interests that are wider than his own, yet she bows to the sheer power, passion, genius of the man.

She is a woman who thinks for herself. The following is from a memorandum made by Florence Hoyt, her cousin and intimate friend:

"She told me of her religious difficulties. 'Carlyle helped me with his doctrine of work. I thought that was the best way, to go on with your work and wait for the solution to come. I think now that it was a poor way. You can let things alone too long. If you have the courage to take the question up you can find the way. I had always supposed I was not intelligent enough to read Kant and Hegel. But they are quite comprehensible.' Then she told me a great deal about her reading on that line and of the happiness it had brought to her. We had a great deal of conversation at that time about Hegel, Campbell's 'The Atonement'—all of the books to which she had led me."

Strength in Weakness

At another time she tells her cousin:

"I have learned one thing. You try and try with all the strength that is in you to help a person, and you can't. Suddenly you find that you can help in your weakness as you can't in your strength. Woodrow had been so far from well, so discouraged and despondent. I had tried and tried to give no sign of weakness, to be strong to help him. I seemed to have lost all the power. Then I was all weakness, and that helped him as nothing else could have done. He has been wonderful. He has dropped everything and bent every energy to help me. And it has brought him up out of his own gloom. He seems really to have improved physically."

The very essence of her spirit is in the observation, also to Miss Hoyt:

"I wonder how any one who reaches middle age can bear it if she cannot feel, on looking back, that, whatever mistakes she may have made, she has on the whole lived for others and not for herself. I cannot see how those who believe that life is only for development of the self can look at their past years when they get older and have a more sober point of view."

With such a companion, re-enforced by her strength, steadiness, wisdom, Wilson was ready to face the world. The anxiety, the self-questioning, the fierce extremes of feeling of the Johns Hopkins period were now for a time to be calmed in the rich home life at Bryn Mawr, and the labor and joy of the new work. To be calmed for a time only. For these intensities and passions were of the essence of the man's character.

Tomorrow the biographer will introduce Woodrow Wilson as the educator and author, about to begin his chosen life work at Bryn Mawr College, where he is to instruct young women (not because he likes it) for the next two years.

A. F. OF L. HITS MINE BAN HERE

SHOUT THUNDEROUS AYES IN VOTE FOR BEER

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 12.—(AP.)—The American Federation of Labor's thunderous cry for "wholesome beer" and its demand that courts be deprived of some of their power to use the injunction against unions remained the liveliest issue before its annual convention here today.

A resolution favoring modification of the Volstead act to permit the sale and manufacture of "wholesome beer," defined as containing 2.75 per cent alcohol, brought a thunder of "ayes" from delegates yesterday. There was a scattering of "nays" when the question was put, but the affirmative was overwhelming.

News of the signing by Federal Judge F. P. Schoonmaker in Pittsburgh of the decree making effective the sweeping court injunction against the United Mine Workers brought a barrage of protest from labor leaders assembled here for the convention. The news of the signing of the decree came almost at the moment when the convention was passing a resolution for amendment or modification of the Sherman anti-trust law in order that it might not interfere with organized labor. The vote followed hours of oratory, during which the use of court injunctions in labor disputes was under a steady fire of speakers.

President Green acted as spokesman for the union leaders in denouncing the Pennsylvania injunction as a "further step of encroachment in the use of the injunction upon the rights and activities of the trade unions."

"Judge Schoonmaker has fulfilled the tendencies of the courts to broaden the use of injunctions in industrial disputes," Green said. "The right to picket, denied by this injunction, has been regarded as an inherent right. I will say that in my opinion the order completely destroys all rights of the United Mine Workers employed in the mines of the Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Corporation."

MARRIAGE IS BAR TO JOBS, WIFE ASKS DIVORCE

"I want a divorce because everywhere I go for a job the fact that I am married is a handicap."

That is what Mrs. Condylo Varme told Judge Joseph M. Swearingen yesterday in Common Pleas Court, when he asked her why she wanted a divorce. She had other reasons.

"I am taking care of my mother and father and I am opposed to keeping my husband also. I am now earning $250 a month and want to be free."

Mrs. Varme, who lives with her parents at 136 Monongahela avenue, said she bought a sedan car before separation from her husband. Varme, the wife declared, wanted to take the car and show it to his friends in Homewood. "I would not let him," testified Mrs. Varme, "because the car was the only thing I really owned myself. Then my husband went away." She charges him with desertion.

COUNTY TAKES HOLIDAY

All the county offices and the Orphans Court were closed today, Columbus Day, a legal holiday in Pennsylvania. The Courts of Common Pleas were in session and all jurors were ordered to report for service at the usual time.

This was the last day to file petitions for party appellations and more than 30 such petitions were filed for various parts of the county. While the name Independent party predominates, several petitions were filed for the Citizens' party. In the Fourteenth Ward, where, by a decision of Judge Swearingen, R. C. Dever lost the right to use the Independent party as a vehicle for an attempt to defeat the Republican candidate for alderman, a Clean Ballot party was pre-empted. There were a total of 102 petitions for party names filed since the primary election.

RED SHIELD DAY SATURDAY

Saturday has been designated Red Shield Day by the Salvation Army in its campaign to raise a budget fund of $105,500 with which to continue its work in Allegheny county during the next 12 months. On that day more than 1,000 men and women, members of the Army and civilians will offer for sale on the streets of Pittsburgh and in the larger towns of the county small replicas of the red shield made famous by the Salvation Army during the World War.

The campaign ends Saturday and with four days left the fund this morning stood at $80,000, leaving more than $10,000 to be raised daily during the next four days.

BUTLER PROHIBITION NOMINEE QUITS RACE

BUTLER, Pa., Oct. 12.—Attorney E. H. Negley, who lost in the race for the Republican nomination for District Attorney only to be nominated by the Prohibition party, has filed withdrawal papers with the County Commissioners. S. C. Moore, Republican, and Howard M. West, Democrat, defeated for the County Commissioner nomination at the primary, have announced they will run as independents.

If it was some South American or Central American country we could claim it was unlawful and make 'em take it off.

WILL ROGERS.

Haven't heard from Arthur yet. I doubt if he has seen it. I don't guess he slums much in his reading. If the Republicans don't run Coolidge, history will repeat itself. You saw what happened to Pittsburgh when they thought they could win without Cuyler.

Yours,
WILL ROGERS.

SENATE FOES CERTAIN VARE WILL NOT BE SEATED

PREDICT SMITH BARRED BY BIG VOTE

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON,
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12.—An inquiry, following reports that Senators-elect Frank L. Smith, of Illinois, and William S. Vare, of Pennsylvania, should be seated by the new Senate without a battle, today revealed an unbroken line of opposition in the ranks of the old Democratic-Insurgent coalition, which dominates the upper branch of Congress.

15-VOTE MARGIN

Both Smith and Vare will be barred by the Senate when they seek their oaths of office, the coalition leaders declared, or the Senate will show the greatest and most unexpected reversal in all history. At present indications, these leaders averred, Smith will be excluded by an even greater majority than barred him from the Sixty-ninth Congress, while Vare will be denied a seat by a margin of at least 15 votes.

Senator George W. Norris, Republican, Nebraska, insurgent leader, characterized as "silly" reports on a change of heart on the part of the Vare and Smith opposition.

"There is a great principle involved in these cases and the Senate has twice gone on record opposed to such slush funds as were revealed in the Smith and Vare campaigns. If the slush fund charges were sufficient to bar Smith on an appointment by the Governor of Illinois—which in itself was not subject to attack—certainly no Senator will contend that he has a right to sit in the Senate for the elective term.

"I anticipate no change of front on this very vital principle of clean government. If the Senate should change heart, it would stultify itself."

NYE CONFIDENT OF BAN

Senator Nye (Rep.) North Dakota, insurgent, said: "If these men are to be seated, then the day is not far distant when each and every one of the 96 seats in the Senate will be placed on auction and knocked down to the highest bidder. I am confident the Senate will bar both Smith and Vare."

A Democratic leader, who declined to be publicly quoted, said: "These stories about Vare and Smith getting seated without a fight are pure bunk. The Democrats, who opposed seating Smith last spring, will not stultify themselves by voting to seat him this fall. Much propaganda is going out in behalf of Vare and Smith, but I expect both will be barred."

Some reports recently predicted the seating of both men because Senator William H. King (Dem.), Utah, issued a statement saying both should be given the oath of office. Investigation, however, would have shown that King was paired in favor of giving Smith the oath last spring and paired against the resolution, which barred Smith from the Senate. King's recent statement merely reaffirmed his previous position.

SMITH LOSES AIDES

The vote against Smith last January was 48 to 33—a margin of 15 votes—and a study of the vote indicated the opposition to him in the next Senate would have a better chance of gaining votes than his defense. Of those who supported Smith last January six senators were "lame ducks."

Four of these were succeeded by Democrats, one by the Insurgent, Blaine of Wisconsin, and one by Vare himself. As Vare cannot vote on the Smith question, that alone would mean a loss of one vote for the Illinois man. Blaine would be another loss, while the colleagues of two of the incoming Democrats—Wagner of New York and Hayden of Arizona—voted against Smith. On the other hand, the anti-Smith forces lost one man since January and he was succeeded by Smith W. Brookhart of Iowa.

Unless there is some wholesale change of heart on the part of senators—a thing seldom if ever recorded in Senate history—Smith probably will be barred by a margin of at least 20 votes. The Vare vote probably will be closer, but with the result the same.

PITTSBURGHERS TO GO TO PALESTINE CONFERENCE

As a prelude to the Pittsburgh regional campaign of the United Palestine Appeal, which will begin November 13 and close two weeks later, many prominent Jews in the tristate district will go to Cleveland to attend the national conference of that organization on October 29 and 30.

Charles J. Rosenbloom, campaign chairman, announced the appointment of Mrs. A. H. Vixman as regional director.

BUTLER, Pa., Oct. 12.—A new pardon application from Nathan C. Kartub, Lyndora physician, sentenced in 1917 to 19 years in the Western Penitentiary for second degree murder and conspiracy to defraud an insurance company, was to be presented to the State Pardon Board at Harrisburg today.

Not Appreciated, Musician Is Arrested

John Marock, 47, of 461 Fourth avenue, Homestead, sometime harmonica virtuoso, was arrested while parading the streets near his home clad in underwear and playing a Slavic dance on his five-cent instrument. Some people, awakened by John's music, raised their windows and shouted, "Shoo!"

This gave others an idea and they threw old shoes at the thin-clad minstrel, who in due time was locked up.

Sally's Shoulders

ENGROSSING DIFFERENT LIVELY DRAMATIC

By BEATRICE BURTON

Sally Decides to Give Up Cabaret Dancing After Talking With Aunt

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

SALLY JEROME, pretty and young, is the mainstay of her family while her father is separated from her mother, MRS. JEROME enjoys poor health, so Sally does the housework mornings and office work downtown afternoons, BEAU and MILLIE, her brother and sister, give nothing, practically, towards keeping up the home. Millie quits her job in JOHN NYE'S office, explaining to Sally that he "got fresh" with her. MABEL, Beau's wife, laughs at this story, but Sally believes her. Then Millie goes to work for DAVIDSON, a bond salesman, and when she leaves him she tells the same kind of story about his "getting smart," too. Only then does Sally doubt her. Mabel takes over Millie's old job in Nye's office, and Millie goes to Bermuda with her mother and MR. JEROME, who has become ill and returned to his family for help in his illness. One night Davidson comes to the inn conducted by Sally and her aunt and tells Sally that the real reason why Millie stopped working in the office where he is employed was because she knew that he was in love with Sally. John Nye drops in, finds Davidson making love to Sally, and later tells Sally that she ought to be ashamed of dancing in public in a roadhouse.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

"WHAT on earth ails you, girl?" she asked, in a voice that cracked like a whip, and Sally mildly answered that she would rather talk it over when Aunt Em had more time.

And later that night, when the last automobile had driven away from The House by the Side of the Road, they did talk it over.

"What's come over you, Sally?" Aunt Em asked the minute she came back to the neat white little room, with the windows wide open to the windy October night. "This afternoon you were telling me that you hoped this new costume would last for a long time, and now you've suddenly made up your mind not to dance in it ever again. Is it because of something that that Davidson man said to you tonight?"

"Davidson?" repeated Sally, in a tone that meant that Davidson was less than nothing in her life. "No, indeed—but John Nye said something to me that set me to thinking."

Aunt Emily's face stiffened.

"And what did he have to say?" she asked, in a voice that was all sarcasm.

"Well, after I finished dancing I went out into the hall through the kitchen door," Sally began her story, "and he was there, just getting his hat—and when he saw me he grabbed me by both arms and said: 'That's a fine thing for you to be doing—dancing in public,' or something like that."

Aunt Emily grunted. "You should have worn your mask," she said tartly. "Then nobody would have known it was you."

She sat still for a minute on the edge of Sally's bed, her thin face turned toward the open windows, with the night-time blackness beyond them like black velvet curtains.

"But I can see his point," she added, soberly. "It isn't the thing for you to be doing—a nice young girl—dancing in a roadhouse. For that's what we've got on our hands, Sally, without knowing it until now. A roadhouse! I saw two or three people with liquor flasks down stairs tonight, and I made up my mind that something would have to be done about it right away. . . . Funny that all of this should happene at once, isn't it?"

Still with her face turned towards the darkness, she went on: "We didn't know what we were getting into, did we, Sally, when we started this thing? We thought we'd have a nice, high-class tea house, or a lovely southern-style dining room, serving chicken dinners. And instead of that, what we've wound up with is just a common roadhouse, as bad as The Lark down the road! Of course, it's my fault! I never should have hired that jazz band!"

Sally laid down the black serge dress and went over to her aunt's side, putting her young, strong arms around her.

"It's my fault, too, Aunt Emily," she declared. "I never should have let Ted Sloan talk me into dancing like those Spanish dancers that The Lark had. But I was like you—I didn't know that it would cheapen, not only you and me, but the restaurant itself! Well, now that we've learned our lesson, what are we going to do? I haven't said anything to you about it, but I've noticed that this dancing crowd we have all carry flasks. Do you think we ought not to have the band any more? Just stick to the sober sort of folks who come here for a good, substantial meal?"

Aunt Em shrugged her slender shoulders. "You know we didn't have any business until we did have some jazz music," she reminded Sally, dolefully. "But I guess our only chance is to go back to the quiet sort of restaurant we had in the beginning, and try to hold part of our trade that way. Otherwise we're going to find ourselves with the cheapest kind of road resort on our hands! Only you don't have to go back to office work, Sally. I've plenty of work besides dancing for you right here!"

And so they settled the question, and prayed for the best.

At the end of the week Aunt Emily told the three musicians that she would need them no longer, and she refused to serve dinner to a gay young crowd who arrived with a large whisky flask of chased and heavy silver.

Sally's gay gypsy costume remained where Sally had put it—in the very bottom of her little old tin trunk, with "S. J." on it in brass tacks.

Sally had not heard from Ted Sloan for weeks and weeks. She had scarcely thought of him.

But on the following Sunday afternoon, when he came walking into the backyard where she and Aunt Em sat, seeding Concord grapes for pies, a glow of pleasure warmed her heart for an instant. . . . It was nice to see him again, somehow.

He made her think of the old days in the Trellis street flat, the old days that seemed so happy when she looked back upon them. Like all human beings, Sally had a way of forgetting the unpleasant things of the past and remembering only the pleasant ones. We all do this.

She thought now of the Saturday nights when she and Ted had set out for their long hours of dancing—of the afternoons when he had helped her scrub her kitchen and back porch—of the flowers he had sometimes brought upstairs to her from his mother's garden in the yard behind the apartment building.

Without knowing it, Sally was homesick. Homesick for the people she knew best in the world, after all—her mother, Millie and Beau. Her own people.

Something of her homesick longing was in Sally's deep blue eyes as she watched Ted came across the grass towards her, his hat off, the pale October sunlight on his cheerful freckled face, his crisp red hair. To her, in that moment, he represented the things and the people that she missed.

"Hello," he greeted her, with his cheerful grin. "Here I am, still hanging around after you like a bedridden oyster." He spoke as though he had never been away from her.

Aunt Emily gave him a look that plainly showed her scorn for him and such foolish phrases as "bedridden oyster."

"I'll go into the house and finish this," she snapped at Sally, and carried the grape basket, the colander and the dishpan filled with grape seeds and skins into the house. The screen door banged smartly behind her.

"I see she still loves me just as she always did," remarked Ted, refusing to be insulted or downcast by her treatment of him. "Want to go for a drive?"

"Not particularly," answered Sally. A drive no longer was the extraordinary and exciting thing that it had been before she had learned how to drive Aunt Emily's little car around.

"Let's go anyway," pleaded Ted, and they went.

"I wanted to talk to you," he said when they were miles away from home, flying along under the silver-white clouds and the blue sunny sky. "Some fellows I know had dinner at your place the other night, and they told me you weren't dancing any more. They said the place was deader than a door nail."

"Did they?" asked Sally, indifferently. It made very little difference to her what any of Ted Sloan's friends said about The House by the Side of the Road. Most of them were the kind of people who preferred a place like The Lark, anyway—the kind of place that boasted of a Marimba band, a dressing room with an attendant who sold lip-sticks and face-powder, and waiters who knew where contraband liquor could be had—and who sold it, too!

"That's why I came out to see you today," Ted went on. "I had made up my mind that I was off you for life, until I heard that you had come to your senses and stopped dancing—"

"But you danced with me, once upon a time!" Sally gasped, wondering how he dared take this high-and-mighty, holier-than-thou tone with her. "You were the person who suggested that we do it in the first place. Don't forget that!"

"Oh, no—" Ted began, but she cut him off short, furious color blazing in her cheeks and blue fire showing in her eyes.

"Why, you were, too!" she contradicted him hotly. "Don't you remember the night when you took me to see those Spanish dancers at The Lark? For goodness sake, stick to the truth, Ted! It was you who put me up to dancing in Aunt Em's dining room in the first place, just as I said. And then after you started it, you began to be ashamed of it!"

To Be Continued.

Merely Margy, An Awfully Sweet Girl

Story by Lloyd Mayer

By John Held, Jr.

SHHH!
NOISY!
AND WHAT A HEAVY NECKER, HE TURNED OUT TO BE!
BUT MARGY, YOU CAN ONLY BE YOUNG ONCE!
ONCE IS ENOUGH! IF YOU PLAY IT RIGHT!

"My dear, this odd soul NOIsy ACtually SLAYS me, no less, because I mean I simply CAN'T underSTAND him at ALL. You know how sort of terribly reSERVED and SHY he always is, my dear? Well, you've honestly NEVer in your LIFE seen anybody CHANGE so as he did on this HOUSE party! I mean you'd ACtually have never KNOWN him because, my dear, he SUDdenly blossomed OUT, sort of, and became AWfully sort of DON JUANny all of a sudden—can you BEAR it? I mean I HONestly don't think he knew his STRENGTH until he met this awfully SNAPpy BIMbo, my dear, who SIMply anNEXED him without a STRUGgle because I mean NOIsy was simply DYing to FALL for somebody, and this KIPpy little QUEEN got a terRIFic BOOT out of seeing him let GO, do you know what I mean? Well, ANYways, it was REALly perfectly SCREAMing because you might KNOW that ARab would be taking it all IN, because I mean there is nothing of THAT sort going on that ARab is not INstantly HEP to, so when he sort of LED me mysTERIously hither and YON one evening I knew SOMEthing was up but I hadn't the VAGUEst idea WHAT, until we SUDdenly discovered NOIsy and this GIRL in a FOND emBRACE—can you BEAR it, my dear? But I mean I HONestly can't say much for NOIsy's TASTE if he will fall for a girl like THAT because I REALly think she was the TYPE of girl that just lets ANYbody neck her—I mean I ACtually DO!"

Love's Embers

Absorbing Sequel to "Revelations of a Wife" By Adele Garrison

"She Was a Daughter of the Gods, Divinely Tall"

IF I HAD no particular interest in the new tenants of The Larches, I should have welcomed the opportunity to visit the house. Once one of the show places of the countryside it had been untenanted for 20 years following the death of its owner, but had been so zealously guarded by a crabbed old caretaker that few people had the opportunity to look inside the house or the grounds. Yet always I had felt a liking and an attraction for the big rambling old house.

I think each one of us prepared for the call upon the queer new tenants with extra care in our dressing. From little things Mrs. Ticer had dropped, I guessed that the young chatelaine of the house—for my neighbor had said that she "ruled the roost," and that her aunt and uncle were only figureheads and "waited upon her hand and foot"—was a girl of fastidious taste who not only wore good clothes, but knew them. And when the four of us, Dicky, young Noel Veritzen, Mary Harrison and I, climbed into the car which Dicky democratically drove, I was quite proud of my companions. Dicky and Noel were stunning in light flannels, while Mary and I wore our newest and smartest summer sports frocks. Knowing that the gardens of The Larches had been neglected for years, and that there were few flowers there, I recklessly sacrificed my dark blue delphiniums and rose peonies, and carried a cluster of blossoms calculated to appeal to any lover of flowers or color enthusiast.

That we were expected, I saw, as Dicky brought the car to the foot of the broad old steps, and we saw a tall, slender feminine figure rise from a chair on the porch and come to the door.

"Mrs. Graham?" she said, with a touch of shyness oddly contrasting with the assured movement with which she had covered the space between her lounging chair and the door.

"Yes," I answered promptly, as she came to the side of the car before Dicky could open it, and held out her hand. "And you are Miss Lincoln, are you not"

She gave me an affirmative answer, with her eyes apparently looking straight into mine. But I had seen the quick, startled, gratified glance which she shot at Noel Veritzen, and knew that she was already grateful to me for bringing to her temporary home the young man who had so strongly attracted her fancy.

I introduced Mary, Dicky and Noel, and I saw her look appraisingly at Mary's delicate beauty, her loveliness a little obscured now by her long illness, but still something to reckon with, were any rival to contemplate trying to supplant her in masculine regard.

Later, I saw her covertly watching both Mary and Noel.

I never had seen anyone quite like her, I told myself after she had settled us in seats on the veranda, exclaimed rapturously over the flowers and summoned Mrs. Ticer to bring her a vase for their arranging. One instant, as for instance when explaining that her aunt was ill and could not see us, and that her uncle was away, she was quite the grande dame, with the poise of one used to drawing rooms. The next, when arranging her flowers, she was quite a joyous, excited child, and her manners to Mrs. Ticer alternated between a haughtiness that was almost arrogance, and a gamin-like friendliness.

But she was breath-taking in her beauty, I acknowledged that. She was "a daughter of the gods, divinely tall," but instead of being "most divinely fair," she was dark, with a wonderful creamy skin and great voluptuous dark eyes.

I cast a surreptitious glance at Noel Veritzen, whom Miss Lincoln was frankly studying to see what impression her beauty and her open interest was making upon him. With a little thrill of satisfaction I saw that his manner held only perfunctory courtesy. But Dicky! I caught my breath. He was looking at his hostess not only with the admiration which his artistic soul always accords beauty, but with a rapt studying scrutiny which startled me.

EVERY business day approximately $150,000 worth of merchandise that is not actually sold is delivered to Pittsburgh District homes. Day after day this tremendous volume—almost a million dollars a week—is returned.

The cost of maintaining this floating stock, the time and expense of collecting it and the depreciation which inevitably occurs represent a continuous loss to retail stores that adds to the cost of doing business and the selling price of goods.

A large percentage of these returns could be avoided, if customers selected more thoughtfully.

Your cooperation is asked to reduce this great waste. Retail merchants request that as far as possible, you be sure the goods you select are what you want, and that when returns are necessary you make them promptly. Inevitably the saving will be reflected in lowered selling prices.

This advertisement is published by The Merchants Council of the Chamber of Commerce of Pittsburgh in the interest of better and more economical buying.

It costs you, as well as the store, to return goods excessively.

SCHOONMAKER, P. & L. E. RAIL HEAD, DIES

Col. James M. Schoonmaker, 85, chairman of the board of the Pittsburgh and Lake Erie Railroad and a notable figure in the industrial, financial and civic life of Pittsburgh, died last night in the Allegheny General Hospital following an operation for appendicitis.

His fatal illness developed suddenly. Last week he attended the games of the world series and was one of the most ardent rooters for the Pittsburgh team. Despite his years he was active to the last in business and in the enjoyment of his hobbies. The youngest brigade commander in the Civil War, he was one of the last survivors of the Union officers of advanced rank.

Although distinguished as a pioneer railroad man in being one of the chief promoters of the Pittsburgh and Lake Erie Railroad and the development of the Little Sawmill Run coal field, he was active in many other enterprises. He was vice president of the Union Trust Company, a director of the Mellon National Bank and executive of many of the subsidiary companies of the New York Central Lines system. He was an intimate friend of the late Judge E. L. Gary and of many of the leading financiers and industrialists of the last half century.

Col. Schoonmaker was even more widely known for his distinguished military service, his work in behalf of Civil War veterans and his activities for national preparedness.

Born in Pittsburgh in 1842, he was a student at the University of Pennsylvania when Fort Sumter was bombarded and at once left his classroom and enlisted in a local company of recruits attached to the First Maryland Cavalry. After a year in the ranks he was promoted to captain and ordered to Pittsburgh where he recruited the Fourteenth Pennsylvania Cavalry and was elected its colonel. In 1864 he was promoted to the command of the First Brigade of Averill's Cavalry and distinguished himself in its operations in the Shenandoah Valley. He was awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor for gallantry in action at the battle of Winchester, September 19, 1864, when he led a famous charge against the Star Fort, key to the Confederate position.

It was in this campaign that he captured the city of Lexington, Va., and ordered a squad of his men to fire a salute over the grave of Gen. Stonewall Jackson. The southern people never forget this act of military courtesy from a foe, and Col. Schoonmaker was an honorary alumnus of the Virginia Military Institute. He made frequent visits there to attend the commencement exercises.

At the first Memorial Day ceremony in 1866, Col. Schoonmaker was one of the leading spirits and for 60 years he assisted in the exercises at the soldiers' plot at the Allegheny Cemetery. At the fiftieth anniversary of the battle of Gettysburg in 1913, he served on state commission in charge of the celebration. He was an active promoter in the erection in 1910 of Soldiers' and Sailors' Memorial Hall.

At Appomattox the "war was over" for the Pittsburgh colonel and years afterward when a small group of Southern women here formed a local chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, Col. Schoonmaker assisted their work and was elected an honorary member of that organization.

When the World War broke out in 1914, Col. Schoonmaker was one of the organizers of the Pittsburgh branch of the National Security League and held several positions on the national defense boards of the government.

Returning to Pittsburgh at the close of the war, Col. Schoonmaker interested himself in the mining and shipping of coal on the Ohio River and the manufacture of coke. A little later he became associated with the Pittsburgh and Lake Erie, of which he was one of the organizers.

Col. Schoonmaker also bought the famous Little Kanawha syndicate of coal properties after they had been refused by the Gould interests.

He was a member of the Pittsburgh, Duquesne and Pittsburgh Country clubs and the Railway Club of New York.

His philanthropies included the establishment of several of Pittsburgh's hospitals and many years of activities in behalf of the blind. He was president of the Pennsylvania Association for the Blind for many years.

He leaves his widow, Mrs. Rebecca C. Schoonmaker; two sons, James M., Jr., of Pittsburgh, and W. H. Schoonmaker of Montclair, N. J.; a daughter, Gretchen C. Schoonmaker of Pittsburgh; three sisters, Mrs. William C. Wood and Mrs. F. H. Andrews of Plainfield, N. J., and Mrs. J. J. Brown of Asheville, N. C., and a brother, F. W. Schoonmaker of Montclair, N. J.

HARPSTER-AMOS DUEL SEEN FOR GAME SATURDAY

'Hookey' Wrecks School Team

WAYNESBURG, Pa., Oct. 12.—Waynesburg High School's hopes for a championship football team were wrecked yesterday when six regular players were banned from taking part in further athletics for having played "hookey" from school last Friday to attend a game at Fredricktown. Waynesburg plays Republic High here Saturday.

NOTES of the BOXERS

HOMER ROBERTSON, former local Negro middleweight, who returns here for his third bout in a short time, against Maxie Rosenbloom of New York, at Motor Square Garden next Monday night, is going on to California after his engagement here. He has been signed for three bouts on the Coast, against Bert Colima, Dave Shade and Leo Lomski, in the order named.

Emmett Rocco, Ellwood City heavyweight, advanced another notch last night when he bested Sandy Seifert, local star, in the 10-round windup at Youngstown. According to reports Seifert won only the sixth and seventh rounds. Andy Stahura of Braddock lost to Pete Canal of Youngstown in the semi-final.

Bobby Young, Duquesne lightweight dropped a six-round decision to Irving Berndt of Milwaukee last night.

Tommy Crowley, local lightweight, boxes Frank Gardini in one of the preliminaries to a battle between Dave Shade and Jack McVey at Cleveland tonight. Red Unlan and Allentown Joe Gans will meet in the semi-final.

Danny Kramer boxes Jackie Spencer of Cleveland at Culver City, Cal., tomorrow night.

Mike Moran and his cousin, Tommy Moran, left last night for Indianapolis, where they will make their boxing headquarters for several months under the management of Mike Mitchell.

Young Rudy, the Charleroi lightweight, hopes to make up for his defeat by Teddy Welch at Motor Square Garden Monday night when he meets Harry Taylor of the North Side for the third time in the main bout at McKeesport tomorrow night. Bobby Richardson of Portage and Teddy Esterbrook of Niles, O., will box in another 10-round event on the card.

James (Red) Mason wants to match his light-middleweight, Ray Shafer, with Bobby Richardson.

SOCCER By TOM BIRNS

Following its defeat at the hands of the Mustard Hollow club in the American League, Heidelberg will face another stiff problem on Sunday when the Harmarville Whippets are met in the first round of the West Penn Senior Championship. This is going to be a real fight. From the looks of things at the present time there is more than an even chance that the game will be staged at Heidelberg.

Sunday soccer has been stopped for the time being at Harmarville, Saturday ball does not pay, so there is more than a possibility that the game might be switched to Heidelberg. Robinson knows that it takes money to run his club, and he would be foolish to pass up any bets along this line.

On Saturday all roads should lead to Lawrence Park, where Mustard Hollow, conquerers of Heidelberg, will make its first appearance in Pittsburgh. Of course, the players are all well known in the district, but the club itself is a new proposition. Harry McClurg will have his best combination on deck, and the Rovers will be tough to beat.

Another local derby will be the playing of the Pittsburgh Celtics-Pittsburgh Lafayettes game in the senior competition. It seems as if all of the best games came out of the hat in the opening round. The Celtics are our cup fighters, and the Lafayettes will have some keen competition before the blowing of that final whistle.

Quite a number of games will be staged in the first round of the junior competition, but most of them will be played on Sunday. Dunlevy will come to Heidelberg to meet the juniors, and this game should attract quite a crowd of fans. The juniors play typical cup tie soccer. And real battles ensue for 90 minutes.

National Tube will swing into action on Sunday after a two weeks rest. The Tubers are playing wonderful football this fall, and must be classed as logical winners of the International League.

Just how the Montgomery outfit will fare against the stronger clubs in the cup competition remains to be seen. Tube do not play the kind of soccer that gets anywhere in cup ties. The pretty soccer of the pattern weaving kind so common in league games is typical of the Tube City entry.

The games Saturday and Sunday in the first round of the West Penn cup start a long grind that finishes on St. Patrick's day. Many things will happen before that rolls around, and the long struggle ahead will test the class of the clubs entered in the race.

There has not been any outstanding players to date. Most of the clubs have been displaying teamwork without any efforts on the part of an outstanding star. Of course, when the big games start on Saturday, and the players are in better physical condition there is a chance that more individual soccer, along the solo lines will be on display.

Fight Results

At Youngstown—Emmett Rocco defeated Sandy Seifert, 10 rounds; Pete Canal defeated Andy Stahura, 6 rounds; Jackie Powers knocked out Young Lawrence, 1 round.

Skibo's Toe Big Factor

By JESS CARVER.

ON THE blunt toe of Howard Harpster's good right foot may depend Tech's chances of victory in the game with W. & J. at Forbes Field on Saturday. This ball game is the football piece de resistance of the day for the Tri-State district, with Pitt playing Drake away out in Des Moines, Ia., and Duquesne battling Bethany at Bethany.

Before going into the details of how "Harp" may kick W. & J. to defeat, one may not, let it be mentioned that the Pitt squad, headed by Dr. John Blair Sutherland will entrain for the West tonight, about 9:30, and will work out on Stagg Field in Chicago tomorrow, going from there to Des Moines. The Panthers will enter the game heavy favorites over Drake, and why not?

Coach Sutherland will take the following players to Des Moines: Capt. Gibby Welch, Jimmy Hagan, Walter Hoban, Toby Uansa, Dick Booth, Tom Parkinson, Dwight Fyock, Charley Edwards, Paul Fisher, Felix Wilps, backs; A. A. Guarino, Felix Demoise, Joe Donchess, Phil Sargeant, ends; Lin Kern, Andy Salata, Chester Wasmuth, Michael Getto, tackles; John Roberts, Alex Fox, Ray Montgomery, Chester Doverspike, guards; Andy Cutler, Dick Goldberg, Jack Shaw, centers.

Dr. Thomas Kendrick, team physician; Ollie Dewitor, trainer; Assistant Coach Charles Bowser; K. B. Davis, graduate manager; Frank W. Williams, assistant director of athletics; Varsity Manager William McKee and Assistant Managers David Stewart and Robert Brinker will accompany the squad.

But to return to Harpster and Tech. If this guy Harpster is punting up to form, and the Tech ends will only go down the field without a special invitations from Wally Steffen, Howard is very likely to hold the Presidents at bay, for I cannot hand W. & J. so very much on its line. And then, Harpster is almost a sure shot with a field goal any place within sight of the goal posts.

LINE MAY HOLD

The Tech line, will, if it gets have a break, hold Andy Kerr's running attack fairly well in hand. Cowan, Anderson and Meitziner ought to keep Amos from plunging the center of the line for gains of too great extent, and the tackles, if well backed up, should stop those nasty off tackle drives of Kirkman, Cook and Old Bill Amos himself.

Where the W. & J. superiority is most likely to crop out is in the air. Thiel threw plenty of passes past the Tartan defense, and there is no reason to suppose that W. & J. with a better team than Thiel, won't be able to do the same thing. The Tartans didn't get the needed workout against Drexel last week in this department of the game's defense.

All things being equal, Harpster is possibly a better punter and all-around kicker than Amos. He doesn't have Bill's bulk to withstand the pounding, and his may work to Tech's disadvantage. But he's a smooth baby, and no mistake. His coolness, ability to relax and his brains are the most valuable asset on the Tech team.

It looks very much like a Harpster-Amos duel Saturday.

NEW ARLINGTON TRACK READY

CHICAGO, Oct. 12.—(AP.)—The largest and one of the finest thoroughbred horse-racing plants in America will open its gates at Arlington Heights tomorrow for a 19-day session, which closes 172 days of racing this summer around Chicago. A grandstand, seating 20,000 persons, and a clubhouse five stories high and 300 feet long are the principal structures of the $2,000,000 course.

Two tracks, the outer one a mile and a furlong and the inner one just one mile, are so arranged that races starting on the inner strip can finish on the home stretch of the outer course in front of the stands. A steeplechase course will be built inside these two ovals for next year's events.

Both the open air paddock and the one under shelter open into a tunneled lane leading between the stands and the clubhouse. The lower level of the huge grandstand, the largest at any track in this country, is a 400-car garage. The first floor contains the men's mutuel department and the floor above the ticket windows for women. Restaurant, tea-room and ballroom also occupy the top floor.

The track and stands were finished for the scheduled opening day last Monday, but the approaches were deep in mud from continued rain, making a three-day postponement necessary. The Hawthorne program was extended to fill the gap.

The original opening day feature will be the Chicago Day handicap at one mile, with $10,000 added. Happy Argo, champion sprinter of the East, drew top weight of the 10 entries, 132 pounds. Chicago and Flat Iron were ranked next by the handicapper with 129 pounds each.

CUYLER REFUSED TO PERMIT TEAMMATES TO INTERCEDE FOR HIM DURING CRISIS

KI-KI REVEALS PLAN TO ASSIST HIM

How jealous of the Waner boys I was may be shown by the fact, and there must be thousands of witnesses to this, that on a night in a Pittsburgh broadcasting station at the outset of the local season I made a prediction in a radio talk that Paul Waner was such an expert batsman, the best I ever saw, that I was certain he would lead the National League batters this season. I would hardly say that of a man who was supposed to be turning me green with envy. It wasn't hard for me to say that because, outside of his great hitting ability, Paul Waner is one of the finest boys that ever walked onto a big league field. And his brother, Lloyd, is just the same. Why should I be jealous of a kid who was doing such remarkable work in his first year?

The spirit of modern baseball is for the players to help each other. I could not have been very jealous of Lloyd when I told him—after I got hurt, curiously enough, in sliding into a base—

By HAZEN CUYLER,

that if there was anything I could show him about playing the outfield I would be glad to help him out in any way I could.

Then, on that day when I thought—or I hoped against hope—that when my good friend, Pooch Barnhart, was unlucky enough to be laid up, and how good he was going, too!—on that day, I say, when I hoped that maybe I would get a chance to get back in there and be allowed to show I was ready to play my head off to help win the pennant, my heart sank considerably when, after playing one game, I was again benched to make way for the talented Comorosky, who had just reported from the minor leagues.

I helped Adam out as much as I could. He is a boy with real ability, and, remembering how when I broke in I welcomed advice from my elders about any points they had gained from experience, I showed Adam how to play for the various batters—as best I could.

I mention all this, not to show that I was doing anything unusual, for what I did any decent fellow in my position would have done, but I mention it to show that at no time during all my trouble was there any enmity on my part toward others or any enmity on the part of other players toward me.

Friendliness shown toward me came from various players. While I was on the bench, one player came to me and said:

"I'm going to the front for you and ask Bush to put you in the lineup to help us win."

Later this was repeated by another member of the squad. Still later, two other players came to me to say they were going to ask for a meeting at which time Bush would be asked to use me in the interests of the club.

Advised Against Intercession

It was when these last two came to see me that I sensed the danger of such a proceeding. I was certain it would do no good, for a series of events had shown me all too plainly that I was through forever as a Pirate and to these friends I said:

"Now, don't do that. It will bring no good result and it is dangerous to you fellows and to the club in general. It might start a general rumpus which would be a repetition of what happened in 1926 when trouble arose over a meeting which hurt our chances for a pennant.

"Whatever you do, no matter how strongly you feel, don't go through with your idea. That would just about ruin the pennant chance of the boys."

This, perhaps, better than anything else shows what the sentiment among my teammates was. I am not saying I would have done more, or even as much, as the boys who were in while I was on the bench. I was grateful to know, however, that, besides my friends among the fans, there were some teammates, too, who thought I should have had a place in the lineup.

SORRY HE'S THROUGH AS A PIRATE

Regrets He's Leaving City

This is the end of my story, the last chapter of my career as a Pirate. Fans may say:

"Well, I guess Cuyler will be glad to get away."

To the contrary, I am sorry. Leaving means the loss of many valued friendships here, means that in another city I must once again go among strangers.

My future? You know as much as I do. I only know that wherever I go I will give my best as I always gave my best here. And wherever I go, I will carry a strong affection for the people of Pittsburgh who were so kind to me in my misfortune this year.

BROOKLYN CLUB SEEKS CUYLER

SPORT COMMENT by JAMES J. LONG

THE difference of opinion in fanning circles as to whether the battery error that gave the Yankees the winning run in the ninth inning of the fourth game of the world series was a wild pitch or a passed ball has brought about the disclosure of the "inside facts" of a similar happening that has been one of the outstanding foozles in baseball history for more than two decades.

The bobble in question was the oft-discussed "wild pitch" charged against Jack Chesbro, which came with two out in the ninth inning of the final game of the American League season of 1904. There was a runner on third base at the time, with the score tied, and the "wild pitch," as it is chronicled, permitted him to cross the plate with the winning run.

Had the Yankees won that game they would have captured the pennant. But the "wild pitch" cost them the flag and the league championship went to Boston.

But President Clark Griffith of the Washington American League club, who was manager of the Yankees in 1904, has always insisted that Chesbro was not to blame for the happening; and that it was an injustice to score it as a wild pitch.

Following the Miljus-Gooch disaster of last Saturday when each insisted on taking the blame for the fluke that gave the Yankees the winning run and victory in the series, President Griffith recalled the occurrance of 1904 and repeated that the charging of a wild pitch against Chesbro was an injustice, even though nothing else could have been done under the scoring rules.

As Griffith tells it, the dazed condition of the man who, was catching for the Yankees in that inning was the cause of the misplay that lost the pennant. With two strikes on the batter, the receiver gave the signal for a fast ball shoulder high, the delivery on which the hitter was known to be weakest.

CHESBRO, according to Griffith sent the ball to the exact spot indicated, just below the shoulder and squarely over the plate, but the dazed maskman instead of rising to catch it, remained in a crouching position, with the result that the sphere shot over his head and rolled to the stand, permitting the man on third to score with the winning run.

So Griffith contends that the baseball historians are in error in referring from time to time to "Chesbro's wild pitch that lost a pennant." He declares it was not a wild pitch and that the catcher was wholly and solely at fault for the fact that the ball got away.

IT WOULD have been a wonderful climax to a remarkable season for Chesbro if he had won that game and the pennant, as his pitching throughout the campaign had been sensational, as is attested by the fact that he won no fewer than 41 games.

That record has never been approached in modern major league baseball. In fact, only two pitchers in the history of the major sport has surpassed it.

ONE was Charley Radbourne, who won 60 games for the Providence club of the National League in 1884, and the other was A. G. Spalding of the Boston club in the National Association, the first of all leagues, in 1875, when he won 57 games, lost only 4 and tied 3.

In the modern majors the closest approach to Chesbro's record was 37 victories in a season, pitched by Christy Mathewson for the New York Nationals in 1908.

CHESBRO'S performances in the American League were always followed with particular interest by Pittsburgh fans because he had been one of the stars of the Pirate crew previously.

Jack was a member of the team that won the first two pennants ever won by Pittsburgh. He was purchased by Pittsburgh from the Rochester (N. Y.) club in July, 1899, costing only $1,500, though he later became one of the most valuable pitchers in the country.

JESS PETTY OR VANCE ROBIN BAIT

By CHARLES J. DOYLE.

ALTHOUGH every major league team is reported to be anxious to have Outfielder Hazen (Ki) Cuyler on its squad, the public finds it hard to get a real line as to what the various clubs would offer in return for the fleet star who has been the center of a controversy.

The Sun-Telegraph is able to state with authority that the Brooklyn club will give one of its best pitchers for Cuyler. Wilbert Robinson, manager of the Flatbush crew, informed this writer that he would yield one of his hurlers—presumably Jess Petty or Dazzy Vance—for the outfield ball hawk, "but, added Robbie, the deal would have to include Hal Rhyne, for

MOST VALUABLE

LOU GEHRIG

First base star of the New York Americans and Babe Ruth's rival for home run hitting honors, who has been voted the most valuable player of the season to his team in the American League.

SUN-TELEGRAPH SPORTS
WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 12, 1927

NAME LOU GEHRIG MOST VALUABLE A. L. STAR

By FRED VAN DEVENDER,
Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

CHICAGO, Oct. 12.—"Larruping Lou" Gehrig, phenomenal first baseman and home-run swatter of the New York Yankees, was chosen last night as the most valuable player in the American League, season 1927.

He succeeds George Burns, Cleveland first sacker, who was selected for that honor last year. Others honored since 1922, when the plan of selecting a player for signal honor was first inaugurated are: George Sisler, St. Louis, 1922; Babe Ruth, New York, 1923; Walter Johnson, Washington, 1924, and Roger Peckinpaugh, Washington and New York, 1925.

It was in the series of 1925 between Washington and Pittsburgh that Peckinpaugh, chosen before the series made so many errors.

It is also interesting to note that of the six men selected, three have been first basemen, one an outfielder, one a pitcher and another a shortstop.

Gehrig was chosen as the most

METROPOLITAN CAPTURED BY SARAZEN

NEW YORK, Oct. 12.—(AP.)—The Metropolitan Professional Golfers' Association championship is in possession of Gene Sarazen. Flashing the kind of golf he displayed as national open champion in 1922, he pulled in ahead of a field of 76 yesterday at the Salisbury Country Club with a score of 292, representing rounds of 71-76-74-71.

Leo Diegel finished second with 295, and Bobby Cruickshank and Willie Klein were tied for third with 296.

Joe Turnesa, the defending champion, required 311 for the 72 holes.

MacDonald Smith finished in a tie for fourth place with Charles Mayo of Pomonok, each having 298.

Sarazen started home with the Ryder cup in addition to his newly-won trophy. The Ryder cup, emblematic of the professional championship of the world, is making the rounds of the American players who defeated the British last spring, and it is Sarazen's turn to take it to the Fresh Meadow Club, where he is professional.

KAPLAN HANDS CELLO LACING

NEW YORK, Oct. 12.—Bobbing, weaving, feinting and fuming, Louie (Kid) Kaplan, former featherweight champion of the world who made his home town, Meriden, Conn., famous, earned the decision over Tommy Cello of California, in ten rounds at the St. Nicholas Arena last night.

Kaplan floored Cello for a count of eight in the fourth round, and was clearly the master in every session. A few short rights to the stomach and a solid thump with the same hand on the jaw produced the only knockdown.

Cello was glassy-eyed and thought he was on a fleecy cloud, playing a harp. He staggered to his feet and lasted through the fourth session, despite an unrelenting right hand massage on the ribs.

Cello was continually measuring Kaplan, but he seldom was able to put over a clean blow. Kaplan weighed 133¼ pounds and Cello 134.

BUT THEY LOOK ALIKE

The facial resemblance between these two champions is striking. Miss Payson is the new Canadian women's open golf champion. She won the title last week, defeating Miss Fritzi Stifiel of Wheeling in the final round of 36 holes Saturday, 3 and 2. Tunney, in case you never have heard of him, is the world's heavyweight boxing champion.

Dreyfuss, Bush Silent On Cuyler Story

WITH the publication of the concluding number of "Cuyler's Own Story" in The Sun-Telegraph today, President Barney Dreyfuss and Manager Owen Bush of the Pittsburgh Baseball Club were asked if they had anything to say in reply to Cuyler's statements or any comment to make on them.

President Dreyfuss said:

It is not my custom to enter into newspaper controversies with anyone and I am not going to begin now, in particular, because I cannot see where there is anything to be argued.

"Therefore I have nothing to say. I had nothing to say after the Grimm - Maranville - Cooper deal when the Pittsburgh club was criticized for letting 'valuable' men go. Results brought the answer in that case and results also will bring the answer in this one.

"I am sorry for Cuyler because he made the mistake of listening to poor advisers instead of to those for whom he was working."

Manager Bush's only statement was:

"I have nothing to say right now."

Wheat, Jacobson Get Releases From Macks

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 12.—(AP.)—Zach Wheat, veteran outfielder, will not be with the Philadelphia Athletics next year. He has been given his unconditional release by Connie Mack, and whether he will fade out of the major league picture in which he was conspicuous as a hitter for many years, is not known. While he was given his release before the season closed, it did not become definitely known until Mack admitted it today.

"Baby Doll" Jacobson, another outfielder, also has been given his unconditional freedom from the Philadelphia Americans.

THROUGH the SPORTLENS by HARVEY BOYLE

A THOUGHTFUL correspondent, probably remembering our mortification after having somewhat fatuously picked Sharkey to beat Dempsey, sends in a clipping from our column of April 9, 1927, a few days before the start of the pennant race.

Harvey Boyle.

The clipping reads as follows:

"Therefore on the basis of the present returns, taking in not only the bare average, not just the paper strength, but the factors of leadership, the chance of harmony on this club and the other, the possibility of luck averaging good to those in line for it, and bad to those who have had their share of good luck in the past, the prediction here is that the clubs this season will finish thusly: Pittsburgh, New York, St. Louis, Chicago, Cincinnati, Brooklyn, Boston and Philadelphia.

"Those banquets and general ovations usually accorded this column at the end of each season as a matter of reward for uncanny judgment and a great eye for what the baseball future holds are more precious in what they reproduce, the morning after in the headlines, than in what they offer at the moment the toastmaster and the other speakers insist on spreading their effusions because of our unequalled perspicacity in picking the winners.

"Each autumn, after the pennant results have vindicated our spring forecasts, we look forward to seeing in the headlines:

"'Local Youth Right Again; Takes No Credit for Gift.'"

Now this prediction was not 100 per cent because the final standings show: Pittsburgh, St. Louis, New York, Chicago, Cincinnati, Brooklyn, Boston and Philadelphia. But anyway it was close enough to have those awful boys who had much fun with us after the Sharkey-Dempsey denouement to pass around the cigars.

THE season of difference of opinion on boxing winners is upon us. It strikes Pittsburgh just about the time the curtain goes up on the local boxing season. The other night the great majority of fans thought Judge Frank Brown and Referee Kennedy were right in giving the decision to Billy Wallace over Cuddy DeMarco. The minority opinion supported the verdict of the other judge. "Which was right?" asks the bewildered citizen anxious to know. He turns to the boxing critics and there finds a split as neat as was the case between the two judges and the referee. What is the answer? There is none. Absolutely no solution. Often the decision is played up by the fans greater than was the bout.

In the case of the DeMarco-Wallace bout the fans could hardly be blamed for that. The bout produced a minimum of interesting action. The only time the affair looked good was when DeMarco was trying out a scissors hold on the Cleveland visitor, combining this little pleasantry such as dragging his opponent from one side of the ring to the other. Wallace put up with this sort of thing for six rounds, meanwhile trying what he thought was good boxing stuff, but in the seventh he began fighting DeMarco's wrestling fire with a similar kind of stuff, and the result was very little fighting, much hullabaloo, and a great deal of wrestling.

DEMARCO is losing what small following he had. He had a "following" which turned out to see him lose, but Cuddy has evolved

Chicagoans Form 'We Want Cuyler' Club

CHICAGO, Oct. 12.—(A. P.)—A petition signed by nearly 200 Chicago Cub fans, forming a "We-Want-Kiki-Cuyler" Club, was forwarded today to President William Veeck and Manager Joe McCarthy of the Cubs.

"With Cuyler and a good third baseman," the petition concludes, "the pennant will be ours next year."

Officials of the Cubs, admitting they admired Cuyler as a great ball player, said they had no idea he was for sale and declined to say whether they had any plans for acquiring the Pirate outfielder.

Do Workers Appreciate Kind Treatment? 'Yes.' 'No.'

By B. C. FORBES

DO ninety-nine of every hundred workers fail to appreciate kind treatment?

One corporation director, after stating that "90 per cent of the employes take advantage of any plan that is put out by any company," says: "It is men like you that write of this work about employes and employers getting together that causes this tremendous amount of social unrest."

COL. R. W. STEWART, chairman of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana, commenting on the column that aroused the other writer's ire—it told of how that and another company handle their workers—says:

"I simply cannot restrain the impulse to write and thank you for this splendid article. I have been working for a great many years on this proposition, and a friendly pat on the back is tremendously inspiring."

ANOTHER letter discusses the same theme. Homer Guck, of the Union Trust Company, Detroit, after saying nice things about our recent articles on Ford and on President Sloan of General Motors, writes:

"In regard to your interesting article relative to the acknowledgement of superior craftsmanship in new buildings, I thought you would be interested to know that the Union Trust Company has worked out a plan whereby the efforts of the workingmen employed in the construction of our new 40-story cathedral of finance will receive proper acknowledgement.

"Ordinarily, when a new building of this nature is erected, there is a bronze tablet in the lobby, giving the names of the officers. Our president suggested that we arrange to have a similar tablet carrying the names of the workingmen employed on the job who show exceptional craftsmanship. In addition, we are planning the distribution of more substantial rewards for superior ability on the part of the men who actually constructed the building.

"I WOULD like to relate several little instances that will demonstrate that in a financial institution such as ours we are able to prove definitely the practical business value of a proper utilization of the spirit of friendly interest.

"On a recent morning, a large delegation of officers and employes took part in the presentation of a gold watch to one of the women employes. The formal presentation was made by our vice president, Merrill C. Adams. A similar ceremony takes place when each employe celebrates his tenth anniversary with the company.

"Last April a janitress in our building for 29 years was retired on full pay and was presented a silver vase filled with American Beauty roses. When that presentation was made, 45 of the janitors and janitresses, as well as officers and employes, were present.

"Then there is the story of Capt. Johnson and Maj. Reynolds. Capt. Johnson is 86. He is on duty every day at our library. He served in the Civil War and a bullet is still lodged in his thigh. Capt. Johnson stood within five feet of President Lincoln when he delivered his Gettysburg address. After retiring on a pension from a railway, he found idleness intolerable and Frank W. Blair, our president, found the kind of a job that suits his capacity. He is on duty every day and is invaluable to the company. Maj. Reynolds is a well-known Detroiter. Notwithstanding his 73 years, he is on duty in our safety deposit vaults every day. Last spring he told President Blair he wanted to pay a visit to his old home in Ireland before passing out of the picture but feared that he might be required to resign his position. Mr. Blair informed him he couldn't quit if he wanted to do so. He took his trip to Ireland with his salary going on all the time.

"All these stories that I have related could be duplicated in the other large banking houses in Detroit, New York or Chicago. We are not the exception, but the rule.

"LAST year the directors voted our president an increase in his salary. Mr. Blair promptly expressed his thanks and assured his directors that he did not need the money but that he would like to distribute the additional compensation among the people associated with him in his work. The director who told this secret said: 'I serve on 11 directorates. This is the first time in my experience where I have seen the executive head of any of these institutions refuse additional compensation.'"

"WELL, is kind treatment wise or unwise?"

THE PRODUCE MARKET

Dealings were slow today for practically all lines of fruit and vegetables at the local wholesale produce district. Vegetables were quite active, with almost unchanged quotations. The fruit market was dull and the changes in price were trifling.

The poultry market was easy and the demand was slow. In the face of supplies, poultry was heavy. No change in the prices was made.

The butter, egg and cheese markets were firm and sold at about unchanged prices.

Cheese supplies continued to be heavy, a total of 750 cars being on track. Included in the arrivals were 5 cars of apples, 3 cabbage, 1 cantaloupes, 6 celery, 2 grapefruits, 114 grapes, 6 lettuce, 14 onions, 1 oranges, 2 peaches, 6 pears, 1 prunes, 21 potatoes, 5 sweet potatoes, 1 beans, 1 cauliflower, 1 peas and 2 cucumbers.

Hay was light in receipts and the market firm. The grain market was steady and the receipts light.

SHEET AND TUBE TO REFINANCE

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Oct. 12.—(AP.)—A refinancing plan by which the Youngstown Sheet and Tube Co. will save $250,000 annually in interest charges is being arranged in New York by James A. Campbell, president of the company.

Within a week a group of New York banks, headed by the Bankers Trust Company, will offer a $60,000,000 5 per cent bond issue. A similar 6 per cent issue is planned by the company to replace its present 7 per cent preferred stock, of which $13,000,000 is outstanding. Most of the concern's indebtedness is now on a 6 per cent basis, which it is planned to cut to 5.

DAMON RUNYON SAYS

NEW YORK, Oct. 12.—The ozone of the Roaring Forties has been what you might call vibrant the past couple of days with voices raised in argument. The moving pictures of the battle of the long count have reached New York, and the boys have been pecking at them and airing their opinions.

DAMON RUNYON.

How the pictures got here is something that concerns only your Uncle Samuel. There is said to be a law on the statute books of this fair nation against transporting moving pictures of pugilistic presentations from one state to another. I am told, however, that there is nothing in the law to prevent the showing of the films once they are successfully transported.

It may befuddle a layman to some extent to figure this one out, but a lot of the nation's laws are confusing to those of us who are not Jerry to Mr. Blackstone.

About all most of us know about the laws is that it is wrong to steal, and that you must pay that old income tax, right or wrong, or get a lot of letters from the government.

Anyway, the pictures are here, and by this time the lads are all positive that Mr. Tunney couldn't have gotten up inside the normal 10 seconds, or that he could. It all depends on the point of view, and whether you love Mr. Dempsey and hate Mr. Tunney, or vice versa.

I VENTURED into the Belmont Theater in Forty-eighth street, the pictures were showing Sunday evening, and though I was at the ringside of a neighborhood brawl, what with the remarks that passed about the premises.

"Run, Gene, run!" bawled a raucous voice, derisively, as Mr. Tunney was doing that very thing after his knockdown by Mr. Dempsey.

"Oo-oo-lookit the great Dempsey!" sneered another voice later on in the proceedings. "What a catcher he is! He'd have to come in handy to the Pirates."

Cheers and jeers rang out in the darkened little auditorium heretofore given over to such classics of the thespian art as "Young Woodley" and other appeals to the intellectuals. The clientele that peered at the pictures would scarcely have been permitted to even stop on the sidewalk in front of the Belmont on ordinary occasions.

The shot that interested the ringworms most, of course, was the seventh round, and the picture of Mr. Tunney squatted on the canvas, while Mr. Barry, the referee, was pushing Mr. Dempsey from corner to corner. Could Mr. Tunney have gotten up inside the 10? That was the question of the hour. Some said yes, some said no.

I am no more able to answer the question now than I was when the scene was being enacted before my eyes in Chicago. It is my impression—but only that, and nothing more—that Mr. Tunney could have arisen in due time.

AS I saw Mr. Tunney squatting on the floor out there in Chicago, he was embarrassed more than anything else. Mr. Tunney has great pride, and you could see that he felt the awkwardness of his situation keenly.

There he was, Mr. Tunney, a millionaire in his own right, spread out on his vestibule, with thousands of staring eyes turned on him. Imagine a Gould or a Vanderbilt in the same posture. I can appreciate Mr. Tunney's mortification and chagrin.

The picture of the seventh round brings out Mr. Tunney's obvious feelings in greater detail, because they put the old slow motion to it. If I were Mr. Tunney I would have the boys restrained from showing this round. It depicts him settled there on the canvas with one hand clutching a rope strand, and the posture is anything but flattering to Mr. Tunney.

However, it seems to be that his eyes are watching Mr. Barry clearly enough after Mr. Barry returns from the task of shooing Mr. Dempsey from corner to corner, and begins the count over Mr. Tunney. It seems to me that Mr. Tunney must be cognizant of all that is going on, especially since he has had all that time to get his thoughts together.

Mr. Tunney's best friend and severest critic will probably not deny that Mr. Tunney was resting on the canvas well over ten seconds.

THE movies rather accentuate Mr. Tunney's backward gallop following the knockdown. Mr. Tunney can certainly get up and dust when he has dusting on his mind. He is seen in the pictures gliding backward as if he had roller skates on his feet, while the soggy-legged Mr. Dempsey pursues.

Mr. Dempsey at one time is seen motioning with his gloved hands at Mr. Tunney, as much as to say, "Come on and fight," but such gestures are strictly the old also, as we say at the club. When a man's legs are commencing to peter out on him in the ring, it is not uncommon for him to motion for his opponent to pause and battle, such pantomime drawing the kind applause of the credulous spectators.

The pictures prove my contention that had the two men been preliminary fighters they would have been hurled from the rostrum before the finish of the third round. They were both pretty terrible in those early sessions.

TECH DENIES STADIUM PLAN

Forbes Field Good Enough

By HARRY KECK,
Sun-Tele Sports Editor.

CARNEGIE TECH has no intention of building a large stadium to house its football games.

Graduate Athletic Manager Clarence (Buddy) Overend said this today in denying a report current in the city that the Tartans were seeking subscriptions to a fund to build a stadium.

"There is nothing to that story," Overend said. "So long as Barney Dreyfuss will rent us Forbes Field for our games we will be glad to play there and not have to worry about the cost and upkeep of a stadium."

Overend added that steps would be taken, however, to revamp the present Tech bowl to enable the team to play its early-season games there in the future in the event the Pirates again become involved in the world series, as was the case this year and two years ago. This arrangement would be limited to a seating capacity of about 10,000, he said, and the facilities would be sufficient to care for all of the school's other outdoor athletic activities.

TEX RICKARD is on the lookout for a good Jewish heavyweight. He believes he can make a fortune with such a contender in New York, just as John McGraw always has looked upon a good star Jewish baseball player. Tex has two rattling good prospects in Jack Gross, of Wilmington, Del., and Arman Emanuel, of California.

THE plan worked out by the W. P. I. A. L. football committee to determine the annual Western Pennsylvania scholastic football champion without resorting to post-season games, as in the past, is a good one. The plan calls for the awarding of points on a won and lost basis and appears practicable. There are many reasons why post-season games for young boys should not be encouraged and the committee is on the right track. Extending the season on into the unfavorable weather following Thanksgiving Day and continuing the strain on the young athletes are bad features.

DOYLE

I want a shortstop from the Pirates."

Robbie's appraisal of Cuyler's value as contained in his statement probably is not the real opinion of Ki's worth. It is the policy of the average manager in angling for a deal to speak in a manner that would lead one to believe that the star of the competing club is not as valuable as we are lead to think. In other words, Robbie might be willing to go further to land Cuyler, but he would not want to show his real hand at the start of the negotiations. And, of course, this would apply to the Pirate side.

About two years ago when Cuyler was standing out as one of the great players in the game, this same Robbie was one of his biggest boosters; in fact the whole Brooklyn club had reason to respect Ki, for the fleet one got in some of his best licks when performing against the Dodgers.

In those days, Robbie used to lose sleep trying to figure out ways to stop Ki at the plate or on the bases. Robbie might refuse to swap even on a Cuyler-Vance basis, but to the casual observer this sort of a deal would not be lop-sided in the least. Cuyler is likely to be playing long after Vance has quit, and naturally this is a big consideration.

Cuyler for Pettty would see the Pirates on the short end, in the opinion of many Pittsburghers. And if Robbie would hold out for Rhyne as a part of the swap, there is small chance that Deyfuss and Rush would agree. Incidentally it might be mentioned that the Pirates would like to get another high-class catcher, and Robbie has one ort two backstoppers who probably would bolster the local staff.

So much for Brooklyn—what chance has Cincinnati of landing the Michigan star?

Cuyler for Critz would be a dark of a deal for the two teams, but such an exchange is only a possibility. On paper, Hazen seems to be more valuable than the clever infielder, despite the fact that each has been voted second in the "most-valuable player" competition. Ki is a much better batter and he is a better baserunner than Critz, but Hughey is a crack secondsacker and the Buccos stand in need of just such an infielder. Moreover, the Reds could use a dependable outfielder to an advantage. Here is one angle to the deal that is worth watching, and, by the way, Critz would be delighted to be sent to Pittsburgh.

That the Cardinals and Giants are after Cuyler is fairly well established. But whether the Pittsburgh bosses would consent to trade Ki to either of these clubs appears doubtful. It would not be the best policy to add strength to formidable flag contenders. Then, too, the Pirates and Giants rarely do business together.

SPORT LENS

a style now that even makes his losing unsatisfactory. A left jab, and a clinch, a little wrestling; a left jab, and a clinch, and more wrestling. Not a bad boy, Cuddy, but a boy who has lost the knack of pleasing the public.

Opinion differs on the quality of the match, even. Mr. Sherman, who has been watching bouts ever since those days the boxers had to elude the sheriff, thought the affair was a good, rough bout. Others grasped at their noses in great disdain.

WITH Billy Wallace was Ray Campbell, Cleveland reporter, who for a time was Tunney's amanuensis. (Isn't that a dandy?) Besides doing Tunney's clerical work, Campbell, too, acted as a Boswell for the heavyweight champion. He can spin you many a yarn about the ice-water nerves of the king of the heavies.

valuable man to his team this year because of his general all-round ability, because he drove in more runs than any other player in the league and because he smacked out 47 home runs during the season, more than any other player in history with the exception of the Bambino himself.

"Columbia Lou," who gets that title because he used to play baseball for the boys up at Morningside, N. Y., finished third in batting average for the season.

In 154 games, Gehrig was at bat 695 times. He made a total of 218 hits for 427 bases. These included 52 doubles, 18 triples and 47 home runs. He drove in 175 runs.

His selection was made by a group of sports writers in each city of the American League. The announcement was made by Ban Johnson, president of the American League.

Gehrig, in being chosen this year was given 36 votes out of a possible 64. Only one writer voted for any other player on the Yankee lineup. That was Posh 'Em Up Tony Lazzeri.

Gehrig was born in New York, June 19, 1903. He became the permanent guardian of the Yankee initial satchel when Wally Pipp retired.

The result of the balloting of the writers for the most valuable player is as follows:

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 12.—(AP.)—Frank O'Doul, outfielder of the San Francisco club, who had been drafted by the New York Giants, today was announced the most valuable player to his club by Harry A. Williams, president of the Pacific Coast League. He was also voted a cash prize of $1,000 by the league directors.

Lynford Levy, Oakland shortstop, was second, and Marty Callaghan, Seattle outfielder, was third.

O'Doul had been in the majors four times, the last time with the Chicago Cubs in 1925. He has been ordered to report to the Giants in the spring.

spitballers, pitched for the Hucs until the end of the 1902 season, when he jumped to the New York club of the American League, which was then at war with the National.

THOUGH the Pirates and Yankees have decided which was the better (at that particular time) of the two teams that finished first in the National and American Leagues, another vital question remains unanswered. That is, which of the two clubs that finished in last place in the major loops was the worst?

As far as figures go it is a dead heat, as one of the unusual features of the final standing of the clubs was that the Philadelphia tailenders in the National and the Boston eighth-placers in the American finished with exactly the same record, each winning 51 games and losing 103 for a percentage of .331.

KERR SPEAKS TO VETS, LAUDS TECH, PITT

By VERNON A. SWARTSFAGER.

EMPHASIZING the fact that the greatest football of any community is played in Pittsburgh and has gone unappreciated, Andy Kerr, head football coach at Washington and Jefferson College, held a group of almost 100 members of the Downtown Post, American Legion, spellbound during his half-hour luncheon talk in the Nixon Restaurant at noon today.

He delved into various interesting angles of the game in opining that he believed there would be no wild orgy of lateral passes, a play taken from the game of rugby; he urged that fans take into charitable consideration the players afield and the coaches before passing judgment upon their heads; he lauded Dr. Sutherland as having one of the greatest grid machines in the nation today; he scored the idea of scouting between football teams and finally wound up by imploring his listeners not to pick Carnegie Tech, whom the Presidents play at Forbes Field Saturday, as the underdog in their battle, laying stress on the fact that in his opinion the Tartans are just as far advanced this year at this time as they were last year when their splendid victory over Notre Dame surprised the sporting world.

"There is a better opportunity to see football in this district than any place in the country," said the former assistant coach of the beloved Pop Warner, first when the latter was coaching at Pitt and later at Leland Stanford on the Pacific coast. "And I am sure that people around here see so much good football that they do not appreciate it."

DISCUSSES LATERAL PASS

He passed lightly over the new relative position of the goal posts and goal line, and went deeply into the subject of the new lateral pass.

"I have coached football for many years, and it is my belief that the new game is superior to the old. The lateral pass will not make a great difference. It has been taken from rugby—it is the rugby pass. The American game is much different from rugby, our tackling is much harder, I'm sure, and we have interference, where it is lacking in the other sport. Football teams are using more double and triple passes as a result. There will be no wild orgy of lateral passes."

Coach Kerr urged the Legionnaires to be charitable to the players afield. He said that a mighty heady play might just as well be a boner, for even the coaches on the sidelines often find themselves in a quandary as to the picking of a right play at the right time. Reviewing the ups and downs of many teams, he also urged consideration of the coaches, who should not be made accountable for blunders of their players, and he cited several instances.

LAUDS PITT TEAM

"The team that beats Pitt this year will have to be a mighty superior one," said Kerr, for Jock Sutherland has one of the finest machines in the country today."

"It is the fundamentals of the game that count," continued the coach, "and scouting between teams is all the bunk. No matter if a team knows all of my plays thoroughly and I know all of theirs thoroughly the game will be decided on five or six outstanding plays, and scouting or knowing the plays that are coming through at you won't stave them off. The best team will win almost all of the time.

"I consider Carnegie and W. & J. evenely matched for our game Saturday. Newspapers insist upon giving us the edge, but there is no reason for it. We lost six men and Tech lost five last year. We have had a hard time winning several of our preliminary games, while Carnegie has run up large scores on its early-season opponents. And I believe that Tech looks just as good right now as it did last year at this time on the eve of its magnificent victory over Notre Dame. I do not think W. & J. is as far advanced as Tech, and therefore we do not deserve being odds-on favorites. The breaks should settle that game, for it will be the first real test for both teams," the little coach concluded.

Bobby Jones Praises Sweetser, Oakmont

ATLANTA, Ga., Oct. 12.—(AP.)—Bobby Jones thinks that Jess Sweetser is the best match play amateur golfer he has met and that Chick Evans is next.

He made this known yesterday when he spoke before the Atlanta Rotary Club in the lengthiest speech of his career. Whether this was in line with the forensic training required in connection with his law studies at Emory University, or by reason of his friendship for R. H. (Bob) Martin, chairman of the program committee, was not disclosed. The fact remained that Bobby spoke 17 minutes and then replied to a bombardment of questions, Mr. Martin having suggested that the club members might like to ask him questions pertaining to golf.

Introducing the British open and American amateur champion, Mr. Martin said:

"This is a great day for Atlanta. Both of America's greatest good will ambassadors, Charlie Lindbergh and Bobby Jones, are in town at the same time. One of them, Bobby, will speak to you in a more intimate way, very likely, than he ever has spoken before."

Bobby did precisely that. He was in a happy frame of mind and he spoke freely and easily on golf and some of his experiences. He dealt with them in a humorous and anecdotal spirit.

The questions came thick and fast, and, smiling, he answered them as promptly as they were asked.

"What course do you regard as the best test of championship golf?"

"St. Andrews," was the answer.

"What course of all you have played do you like best?"

"Oakmont."

This reply was greeted by a roar of laughter, as Bobby's appearance at Oakmont, in the latest American open championship, was his most disastrous experience in that event.

"Who is the best match play amateur golfer you ever met?"

"Jess Sweetser."

It was Sweetser who gave Bobby that 8-7 drubbing at Brookline in 1922.

"Who next?"

"Chick Evans. He's a hard one to beat always; a great competitor."

Bayne Gibson inquired:

"Is it true that you felt you had to win the first British open because 24,000 Scotchmen were betting on you?"

Bobby laughed and his rejoinder was lost in the mingled laughter and applause from the audience.

BARNEY GOOGLE AND SPARK PLUG — Barney Volunteers as a Fireman

WHEN THE DREADED ALARM OF FIRE SOUNDED IN THE VILLAGE, THE SECRET AND MYSTERIOUS ORDER OF THE BROTHERHOOD OF BILLY GOATS FORGOT THEIR FEUD WITH BARNEY GOOGLE AND RUSHED TO THE SCENE OF THE DISASTER — NOT TO BE OUTDONE BY BILLY GOATS IN THE CAUSE OF HUMANITY.
BARNEY RUSHED BACK WITH THEM TO DO WHAT HE COULD TO HELP
JEHOSEPHAT!! THAT'S A BIG BLAZE! IT'S GONNA SPREAD OVER THE WHOLE TOWN IF IT ISN'T CHECKED
MY FADDER HAS TWO EXTRA BUCKETS MISTER; YA BETTER HURRY
THEY SAID IT WAS THE SHERIFF'S HOUSE!! THAT'S THE GUY THAT ORDERED ME OUT OF TOWN AND SICKED THOSE BILLY GOATS ON ME — OH WELL THIS IS NO TIME TO THINK OF QUARRELS.
YOU KEEP AWAY FROM HERE, BARNEY GOOGLE! WE'LL ATTEND TO YOU WHEN THE FIRE'S OUT! IF THIS HADN'T HAPPENED YOU'D BEEN MILES AWAY RIGHT NOW. THIS TOWN AIN'T GOT NO USE FOR BUMS — GET OUT —

THE BUNGLE FAMILY — The End of Another Rainbow

WELL I'M LICKED-TEMPORARILY. INVESTORS WHO WANT THEIR MONEY BACK ARE MAKING MY RUBBER FENDER PROPOSITION FOLD UP LIKE A RAILROAD TIME TABLE.
HA! YOU JUST WOULD TRUST A MAN LIKE D'LANE! WHO TOLD YOU WHAT HE WAS THE FIRST TIME I SAW HIM? WHO?
ANYHOW ALL THE DIZZY PEOPLE WHO LET THAT BABY TALK THEM INTO THINKING THEY COULD GET TWOS FOR A ONE WILL GET THEIR MONEY BACK. M MIND IS MADE UP ON THAT.
WHY HOW SILLY! ANYONE WHO COULDN'T READ THAT MAN'S CHARACTER AT FIRST GL DESE A GOOD L SON OF SOME SORT.
YOU DIDN'T GET ONE CENT OF THE MONEY HE COLLECTED. WHY SHOULD YOU FEEL RESPONSIBLE BECAUSE A LOT OF SILLY PEOPLE GAVE—
WELL AS ONE MAN TOLD ME TODAY, HE SAID; I KNEW YOU WERE A SQUARE SHOOTER COLONEL, AND WHEN I SAW YOUR NAME AT THE HEAD OF THIS FIRM I SOLD MY SHIRT AND BOUGHT STOCK.
WHY DIDN'T THIS MAN INVESTIGATE BEFORE HE SO LIGHTHEARTEDLY HANDED HIS MONEY TO A MAN WHO I DISLIKED THE VERY FIRST TIME I—
WELL I'M HOOKED. THAT'S ALL! I WOULDN'T HAVE TO PAY OUT EVEN ONE NICKEL BUT I DON'T WANT TO GET ONE OF THOSE CREDIT RATINGS THAT READS LIKE A PROSECUTING ATTORNEY'S SPEECH TO A TOUGH JURY.

ELLA CINDERS — Almost a Confession

Now Ella knows what it's all about—and she wishes she didn't a good deal more than she did—she's been chosen by Nihilists to put a Railroad station on the tomb!
IF I DON'T WANT TO GET BLOWN UP LIKE A BALLOON, THERE'S ONLY ONE THING TO DO—CONFESS WHO I AM—THAT I'M ELLA INSTEAD OF OLGA—AND HOPE THAT THEY WON'T BLOW UP, TOO!
YOU SENT FOR ME, COMRADE SMIRKOVITCH?
YES—I—I—FEEL I OUGHT TO TELL YOU—
IT MUST BE MADE SNAPPY—I CAN GIVE BUT FEW MOMENT—I HAVE TO ASSIST AT EXECUTION OF PERSON WHO PRETENDED TO BE MEMBER OF OUR ORDER.....
AND NOW—YOU WERE SAYING, MON COMRADE—
I—ER—REALLY WASN'T! I JUST WANTED TO MAKE SURE THAT OUR PLANS HADN'T CHANGED—THAT EVERYBODY IS SITTING PRETTY—STILL!

THE THIMBLE THEATER — The Trading Post

CASTOR THERE'S NOTHING IN THE HOUSE TO EAT!
YEAH, I KNOW THAT
YOUR DAD'S A FINE EGG!! STOPPING YOUR ALLOWANCE TO MAKE ME SUPPORT YOU. I'M WILLING TO WORK BUT I WON'T TAKE ANYTHING!
CASTOR, WE'VE GOT TO HAVE SOMETHING TO EAT!
YOU SAID IT, CYLINDA, WE'VE GOT TO HAVE MEAT ON THE TABLE
I WANT A CHAIR'S WORTH OF CHICKEN AND A PICTURE'S WORTH OF PORK!
NICE COLD HOT DOGS

DUMB DORA — Practical Dora

BUT A THOUSAND DOLLARS FOR THOSE TREES!!! YOU'RE TOO EXTRAVAGANT!!

OPEN DIPLOMACY

(From the Lamar (Mo.) Democrat)

Say, Arthur, what was the reason you didn't put in the lantha items in the paper last week? Did it rile you so you couldn't see the items or was it on account of space? Please put it in next week's paper, then, for us lanthans enjoy reading the home news.

Many things had to be left out last week. The items were set up, but along with several other things had to be omitted. Sorry. Yours Truly.

OUR MR. FRISBY WAS, OF COURSE, COVERING THE CHICAGO FISTICUFFS

When our Mr. Frisby arrived in Chicago Jack Dempsey would not take no for an answer until they had their pictures taken together. Mr. Frisby was persuaded to send the photo to his wife, who turned it over to us.

By MR. FRISBY

Our Special Correspondent

CHICAGO—Well, here I am and I hardly know how to begin. I arrived last night but was too tired to write anything on the spur of the moment. As I sit here in the depot I am reading "The Haunting Shadow," by Old Sleuth. It is an absorbing tale. If you don't mind I will file some of it with my dispatch. At least it will be different from the stuff the other correspondents are sending out.

"There is a man in my room!"

"Tom Eben, detective, was seated on the piazza of the hotel. It was after midnight and he had been lost in deep thought. He was a bold, cunning man, endearing, kindly, honest, alert, sympathetic, paternal, fraternal, tender, soft-spoken, firm, compassionate, lenient, utilitarian, philanthropic, polite, chivalrous, generous, altruistic, soft-hearted, clement, humane, merciful, grateful, conciliatory, envious and, withal, a cool calculator.

"As stated, he had been in deep meditation, when suddenly a hand was laid on his shoulder and there came a soft voice of a woman, fraught with intense agitation declaring in a hoarse whisper . . ."

Well, well; my 500 words have been used up. How time flies.

FAMOUS LAST WORDS

But, Mister Jannings, why don't you have a happy ending to your pictures?

BUGS BAER Says

IF your sixteen-tube squeal-o-dyne radio has been shedding static and litigation it is because October is the moulting season for power plants.

The unusually loose acoustics among the knob whirlers of America is not due to faulty tuning. You can tune in on a cat fight and all you will hear are screeches and academic howls.

ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER.

The verbal splinters in the public atmosphere are due to the four-tube fact that the international radio-telegraphic conference is holding its first disagreement in Washington this week.

Seventy nations of all calibres and intentions are represented in the radio-telegraphic conference. Their object is to discuss sixteen articles which will bring chaos out of amusement.

There is more to radio than you would suspect from the easy payments.

Important adjustments in international radio retaliation are about to be repaired. When seventy nations get together to talk something over you are sure to inhale some entertainment that will be educational as well as useless.

Japanese, Spanish, Danish, Persian, Lilliputian and hometown boys are all deadlocked on pronunciation and its by-products. There are also delegates from every overtaxed nation in the world.

This means an ideal convention in which seventy languages will be spoken and not one listened to.

An operatic hour with seventy languages jamming the air is worth listening to, for it takes you back to the old one-hoss telephone days when a drunk would give you the mumbles on a busy wire.

The telephone mumbles are terrible things. The man doing the staggering broadcasting knows what he wants to talk about, but his conversation insists on eluding the subject.

And radio mumbles in seventy different shades of patois are enough to make a language student swallow dialect with suicidal intent.

The original remarks will be made in Hindu which will later be diluted to French and reduced to common Siamese. When translating a language most of the contents are lost by evaporation. All that the listener hears are the commas and exclamation points.

But there is no doubt that the international radio-telegraphic conference will do much to promote fraternity and equivalent reprisals throughout the world.

The finest kind of friendships have been built up among diplomats who didn't know enough of one another's language to answer insults in appropriate grunts.

"You Said It, Marceline!"

By MARCELINE d'ALROY

ON "THE SUCCESSFUL FORMULA"

SOME husbands can
Make other men's WIVES
Realize that, though
Happily MARRIED, a
Man does not necessarily Become DUMB and
BLIND to the charms of
OTHER women.
These men, though, are Truly GIFTED. To
Please a narrow-minded
LADY at home, and
Several GAY ladies
OUTSIDE, is, of course,
Mere child's play
To a CLEVER man.

But to take the
WIFE out with him
And then compliment
PRETTIER women
In her presence takes
NERVE, or a fine
Sense of DIPLOMACY. And
Some women WONDER—
Which, A successful husband
ALWAYS has a FORMULA.
He makes no DEMANDS
On others.
To all ages of women
He is AGREEABLE, and
To his own wife—
He is INDISPENSABLE.

Any Opportunities Left?

Yes, a Few; Ask Thalberg

IRVING GRANT THALBERG. HE MADE HIS OPPORTUNITY.

A clerk from his counter, stenographer from his notebook, salesman from his little desk in the automobile showroom, will look up and say: "Ford, Marcus Loew, all those fellows, GOT IN early. And they were lucky. What chance has the average man to get ahead? Success is getting harder every day."

All of which is 100 per cent untrue. Success is getting EASIER EVERY DAY.

There are more important positions than ever, more demand for people able to fill them.

Every man has the chance to WORK HARD, SHOW INTELLIGENCE AND LOYALTY. To do these things means success.

Needless to say not all men can succeed as Ford succeeded. Working hard and loyally won't give you Ford's constructive brain. Not everybody can succeed as Marcus Loew succeeded. Very few would be willing to work as hard as he worked, by the way.

Still fewer, not one in fifty million, could hope to succeed as Thomas A. Edison succeeded. For his success was GENIUS. You must have that born in you. But even genius, as Edison has said, is "10 per cent INSPIRATION and 90 per cent PERSPIRATION."

Irving Thalberg, seen above, illustrates the fact that chances are there for him who works at the thing in hand, not looking at the ceiling and asking: "Why don't I get ahead?"

A little while ago Thalberg, now only 29 years old, had nothing. Now he is acknowledged to be a most distinguished leader in the moving picture industry.

He got a job with the Universal Pictures, at $35 a week, as stenographer. Carl Laemmle took him into his office and made him his private secretary.

Laemmle had entered moving pictures, after he finished his career as a small merchant in a small town. He spent fourteen years in that small town to save up less than he makes in a week now.

To return to Thalberg. HE WORKED. He went from Laemmle's New York office to the moving picture plant in Universal City, near Los Angeles, and CONTINUED TO WORK.

He did the work for which he was paid and studied opportunities to do other work. Those that work hard, AT THE THING IN HAND, KEEP THEIR EYES OPEN AND HAVE AMBITION, don't stay in one place.

Soon Thalberg was running the production end of Laemmle's moving picture business, which means supplying brains, or a large percentage of them, to moving pictures.

A little later Thalberg was in charge, as he is now, of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production. He has produced such pictures as "The Big Parade," "Merry Widow," "Tell It to the Marines," "Scarlet Letter" and "Flesh and the Devil." Part of his daily job, not an eight-hour day, nearer eighteen hours, is described as "editing, cutting, titling, casting, advising millionaire stars, giving fatherly advice to directors, script writers and authors; passing on problems of real estate, exhibitor control and promotional values in his productions."

He must understand the deep emotions and shallow temperaments of moving picture ladies and gentlemen that take quite seriously fame and glory forced upon them by the brains and money of other men and by their own good looks. Those of real talent are even more trouble, for talent is harder to handle than mental mediocrity.

For doing this work Thalberg gets a salary that would make President Coolidge open his eyes. If the President got as much he could retire at the end of a four-year term richer than he would care to be.

Thalberg has a peculiar genius of his own, which is his marvelous capacity for understanding other people, what they can do, and GETTING THE BEST OUT OF THEM.

However, observe that nobody gave him his opportunity. He is only 29 years old, wasn't born early enough to seize the mythical "easy chances" that are supposed to have been lying around 50 years ago.

He worked at what he HAD in hand, keeping his eyes open for a chance to do something better, more useful.

He knew that if he didn't get ahead the only person to blame was Irving Thalberg, and he did get ahead. So can we all, perhaps farther ahead than Thalberg, perhaps not so far, but FAR ENOUGH. If we really work and use 100 per cent of what is in us, instead of devoting 8 per cent to our work, 92 per cent to growling, cigarets, soda water, cabarets, horse races, baseball and learned opinions on the big fight.

Checks to Over Population

A learned Yale savant, who had apparently been counting noses and casting up possibilities, suddenly announced on an unprepared public the dire news that the population of Earth will be exactly 100 per cent thicker in 50 years.

Several agencies ever at work may interfere somewhat with the professor's plans—prohibition liquor, reckless drivers and indiscriminate sale of firearms, to say nothing of war.

The statement that there will not be enough jobs to go round will not worry some as much as one might think.

THE HARD "TOUCH" OF FALL

Garrett P Serviss Says:

Seeing Sideways

A REMARK of Major Bauer, of the Army Medical Corps, about the necessity of a good aviator's ability to "see out of the corner of his eye," points to a species of personal education not often attended to, viz., the training of the eyes to embrace a wide field of vision at a single glance. The ability to do this is a matter of acquirement by practice, and it is often of very great importance.

The means of this education are ready at hand for everybody. Only a little perseverance and self-control are needed to avail of them. For instance, suppose you are sitting with a wall close in front of you, covered with a pattern of narrow vertical lines. Fix your eyes upon a line directly before you and then, being careful not to alter the direction of your gaze, count the number of lines that you can certainly discern on each side of the chosen one.

That will, of course, vary with the distance of the wall. The farther you place yourself from it the larger will be the number of lines more or less clearly perceived. This is so because the linear width of the space on the wall included by the angle of vision increases with the distance. Perfectly clear vision will be obtained only in the central line of sight, but you may be surprised to find how many of the vertical lines on the wall are quite easily seen, so to speak, "without looking at them." With practice you may increase the distinctness with which you can discern and the accuracy with which you can count the lines. Try to see them together in pairs, one on each side.

After this experiment try another. Beginning with the central line, and holding your head unchanged in direction, shift your eyes first to one side and then to the other, fixing the gaze in turn, upon each line as it comes into distinct view. The object is to determine how far toward either side you can turn your eyes while retaining clear vision, and without change in the direction that you are facing.

Then, setting your eyes in a fixed direction again, see how far on either side, without regard to the details, your vision extends.

Once Overs

Dress Your Part

IN manners and dress you are trying to create a good impression. You want those whom you meet to admire you as a "good dresser."

The crowd you will attract on account of your clothes and the way you wear them does not amount to much if that is all they look for.

One likes his friends to be well-dressed, if possible.

There is considerable difference between being well and appropriately dressed and being over-dressed.

To be suitably dressed is worthwhile.

Wearing in an office or on the street, outfits suitable for home or for some social occasion is not only bad taste but it is provincial.

It shows ignorance of what is proper attire.

Women are not the only offenders in this matter.

Some young men are engaged in work that would ruin fine clothes. By dressing too well they cannot give proper effort and attention to their work. They don't know enough to dress for the job.

You can win respect by dressing suitably for the work, time and place you fill.

WORDS OF WISDOM

If we command our wealth we shall be rich and free; if our wealth commands us we are poor indeed.

—Burke.

Tales That Are Told

Yes, What?

HE HAD applied for a job in a tourist agency, and his only fear was because he did not speak any foreign languages.

"Well, supposing we want to send you over to our Paris office," said the manager, who seemed impressed with the applicant's appearance. "Parlez-vous francais?"

"What?" asked the young man.

"Parlez-vous francais?" the manager repeated very distinctly.

"Sorry; I don't quite get you."

The manager blushed faintly.

"Speak French?" he said, with a casual air.

"Oh," exclaimed the other, beaming, "perfectly!"

Fooled Before

HOW his customer could have failed to see the sign bearing the words, "Beware of Fresh Paint," the grocer could not imagine. He hurried forward to placate the angry man.

"I'm very sorry indeed, sir!" he began. "But surely you noticed the warning?"

"I did," replied the victim, looking at the board dubiously; "but I've often seen similar things here announcing fresh eggs, butter, vegetables, and so on, only to be deceived, and I suspected this sign was nothing but another fable."

Telling All

HER daughter had arrived home in the early hours of the morning, and the mother was rather anxious as to where she had been.

"Barbara," she said, "you were very late last night. I'm afraid I'm dreadfully old-fashioned, but I want to know where you went."

"Of course, mummie dear," replied the girl. 'Well, I had dinner with—oh, you don't know him—and then we went to several places I don't suppose you've ever heard of, and we finished at a queer little club—I can't remember the name, but it's in a cellar somewhere. It's all right, isn't it, mummie?"

"Of course, darling. I only wondered where you'd been."—London Answers.

BE A PITTSBURGH BOOSTER

To Your Friends in Other Cities

NEW YORK, Oct. 12.—With Bowery toughs going patent leather, most of the picturesque names have disappeared. When the famous Bowery Boys were slugging and eye-gouging their way to power, there were such figures as Slops Connolly, Baboon Brady, Googy Corcoran and Wildcat Lyons.

In a speakeasy knife affray recently three of the participants were listed as Clarence Farrell, Solomon de Bries and Davis Barclay—names that might have been taken from a Michael Arlen paragraph on Mayfair. All wore silk sox and silk underwear.

The Bowery girls, too, have undergone a complete metamorphosis. The popular picture of the gum-chewing gal in a plaid skirt, sweater blouse and a dinky hat cocked over one eye is merely apocryphal. They may accent the rouge and blondine, but their clothes are not dowdy.

They are not far behind their sisters of Broadway in styles. In the good old days the Bowery girls fought along with their men. Lizzie the Dove, Bunty Kate, Gold Tooth Dora and Ida the Monk were celebrated for their ability to smack down the toughest of the famous Whyo gang.

Then there was that human leopardess, Hell Cat Maggie, who actually had her teeth filed to sharp fangs and her nails bulwarked with brass claws. She went into battle with rousing whoops and many Boweryites carried eyeless sockets and facial grooves to their graves.

The new Bowery tough rarely runs in packs. He is the lone wolf with a pistol silencer. He does not gouge out an eye or chew off an ear nor does he fell his victim with a fist blow and stamp him with hobnailed boots. He has finesse.

The old Bowery gangster thirsted for blood alone. He was not particularly interested in loot. He was content to have a little small change for "third rail" whiskey. The new type wants to sport diamonds and ride in automobiles.

* * *

Scarcely a night passed in the old Bowery concert hall days without a half dozen or so patrons "drawing a blank." This oblivion was brought about with knockout drops slipped into glasses of beer. And victims awakened to the morning sun in alleys rolled for their wad. The "knockout" drops in those unregenerate days left only a stiff headache and a firm resolve to be a better boy.

* * *

In those days The Alligator, The Doctor's, and other houses flourished. In The Alligator a huge glass of beer with two straws was served for a nickel. Two could participate and beer through a straw was supposed to give beer a heftier wallop. Then the patron paid a nickel, stuck the end of a hose in his mouth and could drink until he stopped for breath. Then the supply was pinched off by the barkeep.

* * *

The Bowery's cheap liquor was far worse than bootleg stuff today. It was a common occurrence for some derelict to rush out of a dive and run amuck through the streets, slashing pedestrians. Sometimes it would be necessary to stone and club him off to a strait-jacket.

* * *

In those rough-and-tumble days a Bowery slugger ruled his block by fistic prowess. He didn't ask much—just free meals and drinks. He got them without question and in return would keep ruffians from terrorizing tradesmen.

* * *

The toughest of all the old Bowery gangs was the Whyos, who won their name from the weird battle cry, a long, plaintive "Why-oo-ooo," that had the chill of a coyote scream across the plain. When the cry was sounded the Whyos with dornicks, wheel spokes and hand-made eye gougers went out for real blood.

The Career of Jerdanowitch

By DR. FRANK CRANE

The career of Pavel Jerdanowitch is instructive. His paintings have been exhibited in Chicago and New York and have been favorably commented upon by many of the art journals of America and France.

The French journal, the Review of the True and the Beautiful, asked for the artist's interpretation of his pictures and also for his autobiography. It published a reproduction of one of his paintings, saying, among other things: "This artist has a distinctly individual manner in representing people and objects and uses the brush to symbolize the sentiments. Pavel Jerdanowitch is not satisfied to follow ordinary paths. His spirit delights in intoxication, and he is a prey to the aesthetic agonies which are not experienced without suffering."

The artist in question grew a beard, wrinkled up his forehead and, looking very Russian, supplied his photograph, also his autobiography.

He said he was born in Moscow and came to America 10 years ago. He claimed his picture represented the breaking of shackles of womanhood. Women were prohibited from eating bananas on their native island. The woman in the picture had just taken a luscious bite and was waving the banana skin in triumphant new freedom!

As a matter of fact it was all a hoax.

Pavel Jerdanowitch is none other than Paul Jordan Smith, an author, who doesn't know anything about paintings and doesn't claim to.

His wife is somewhat of an artist, Sarah Bixby Smith. Just for fun he painted a picture of a woman eating a banana and her mouth filled with the luscious fruit. Triumphantly she waved the skin in her hand. A skull lurked in the background.

An artist visiting him took Paul Jordan Smith's picture for a Gauguin. Smith suggested that he couldn't see much in it himself but a crude daub. "Oh, but you can't see into the artist's soul," replied the other. "There is probably a great thought behind it."

So Paul Jordan Smith sent his picture to the Waldorf Astoria for an exhibition in the spring of 1925 and ascribed it to Pavel Jerdanowitch, a name he had made up. He called his masterpiece "Exultation." The critics fell over themselves to praise his work and art reviews spoke highly of it.

All of which goes to show that some highbrow talk is purely bunk.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

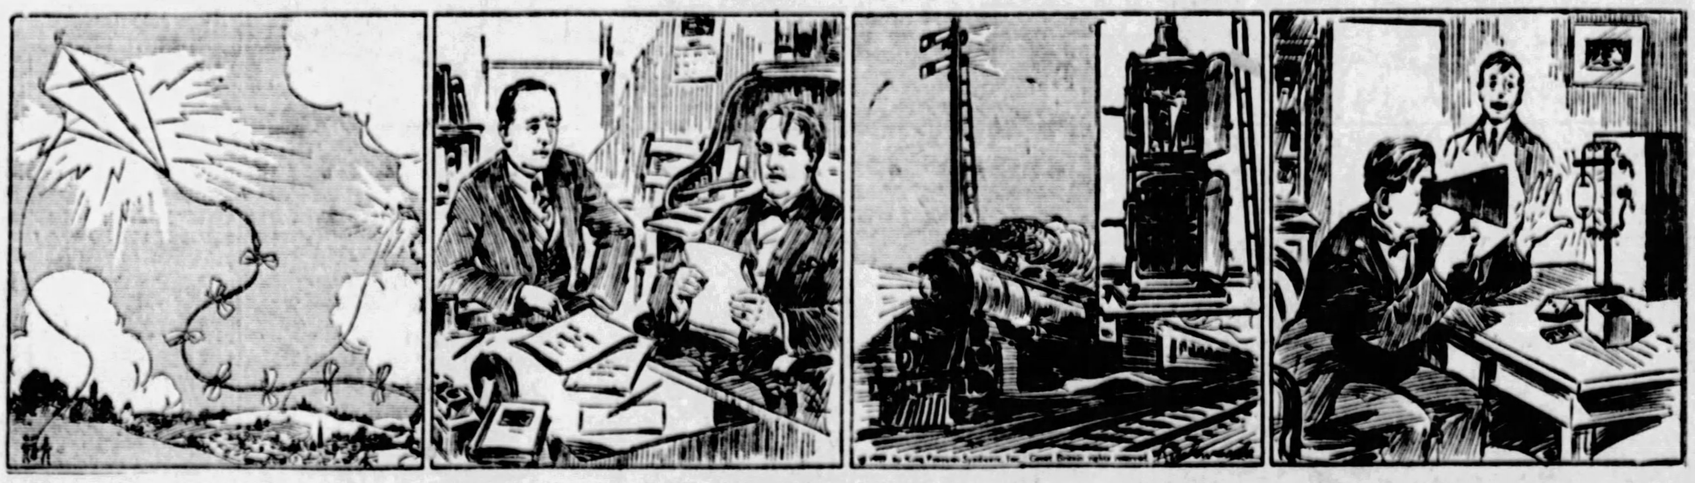
Why

"WHY" is but a foolish word when you sift things down; futile, meaningless, absurd, "why" of smile or frown. Why is money all in all, some men's sole delight? Why does money seem but small in another's sight? Why does some gay, smiling face mean so much to one that its coming leaves a trace bright as rays of sun? Why does charm so dear to him leave another cold? Never, till light's self grows dim, can the tale be told! Men of science love to pry into all things' cause and, forever asking why, seek for changeless laws. Yet who cares to understand planets and their ways when enigmas close at hand fill his puzzled days? Better just to rest content as the seasons fly, taking blessings heaven-sent, sure there is a "why."

THE LIFE OF THOMAS A. EDISON

(Authorized and Endorsed by Mr. Edison)

Text by Arthur J. Palmer
Drawings by Frank Kuchenmeister



FURTHER experiments with long-distance telegraphy were made by means of kites two and a half miles apart. That was the limit of wireless "distance" obtained by Edison. He never could understand why he failed to think of his "etheric force" experiments in 1875. They would have given him true long-distance wireless.

EDISON has always had a high regard for William Marconi and a warm friendship exists between them. Strong influence was brought to bear to obtain Edison's only wireless patent for a competitor of the Marconi Company. Edison blocked the deal and, as told yesterday, sold the patent to Marconi instead.

WE have told the story of the Edison Storage Battery. The Edison Primary Battery is another Edison electrical invention. A primary battery generates electricity within itself. Your "A" and "B" radio batteries are primary batteries. The Edison Primary Battery is used principally for operating railroad signals and lights.

FOR a time Edison was interested in the X-ray. Prof. W. K. Roentgen discovered X-ray in 1895. Soon after, Edison began experimenting with it. He invented a fluoroscope by means of which he could see the bones in his hand. The principle of the fluoroscope is used in X-ray machines for surgical work.
